75 Units For Aged Poor

The Housing Authority of the city of Sikeston received approval of a program reservation for the construction of 75 housing units for low income, elderly persons in Sikeston, Bill Hanna, housing authority executive director, announced today.

Approval of the reservation was made by the Housing Assistance Administration of the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Washington, D.C.

Buchmueller Whitworth and Associates, 412 Tanner, was selected as the architect firm. Competitive interviews with the Sikeston firm and three out of town firms were held earlier this week. The Housing Authority Board selected the Sikeston firm on the basis of qualification, Hanna said.

Site selection will be done by the Housing Authority board.

The approval received by the housing authority has not been received by the regional office of the Housing Assistance Administration in Ft. Worth, Tex., Hanna said.

The expected procedure as soon as the Ft. Worth office receives notification is to set up a pre-development conference in Ft. Worth, Hanna explained.

A representative of the housing authority board, the architect firm and Hanna will attend the conference to obtain forms to proceed in the planning stage. The office will alsp provide forms for the architects contract.

Site selection is expected after the conference.

A program director for the Ft. Worth regional office will come to Sikeston to approve the site and aid in development.

Conran Says Poverty War Must Meet All Needs

By Warren Sokolis

CIRCLE CITY -- The war on poverty program must be adapted to meet the needs of all Bootheel poor, J. V. Conran of Portageville, member of the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation board of directors, said Wednesday.

Conran, speaking to residents of Delmo housing at the community center, noted the need for DAEOC to serve all age groups and meet specific needs in each county.

The concept of a six county-wide program is not the best way to overcome the poverty problem, he said. At the last DAEOC board meeting at Portageville, it was reported by the Office of Economic Opportunity regional office at Kansas City that overall programs for the six counties would receive preference to projects of any one county.

The six counties in DAEOC are Stoddard, Scott, Misssissippi, New Madrid, Dunklin and Pemiscot.

Each county has its own problems that vary greatly from problems in other counties, Conran said. Some overall programs would slight some counties because of differing needs, he explained.

The neighborhood service centers will be of great value to the poor, he said. The surveys being made by the centers will provide a better record of what types of people reside in each county and what their specific needs are.

"If the program doesn't do anything else but set up the neighborhood service centers to do work, it will accomplish something of value," he said.

These centers will serve as referral agencies for health, employment and welfare needs.

Explaining the goals of DAEOC, Conran pointed out the wide range of ages, which the poverty program serves.

For the senior citizens the program provides housing through the federal housing authority. However, this project has limitations since funds are not always made available to those who need low - cost or low - rent homes.

Vocational training schools aid adults and high school dropouts to be retrained with skills necessary to compete on the job market of modern society, he noted.

But, once they are trained, where can they find a job in this area? he asked. The lack of industry causes those trained in the area to look

China Claims Success on Missile Test

TOKYO (AP) - Communist China announced in a broadcast heard here early Friday that it "successfully conducted over its own territory a guided missile - nuclear weapon test" Thursday.

The official New China News Agency said the "guided missile flew normally and the nuclear warhead accurately hit at the appointed distance, effecting a nuclear explosion."

NCNA did not immediately say where the test was conducted.

NCNA said the test showed that China's "defense capabilities are advancing at even greater speed" and called the feat "another new important achievement scored by the Chinese people in further strengthening" China's national defense.

"China's purpose in developing nuclear weapons is precisely to oppose the nuclear monopoly and nuclear blackmail by the United States and the Soviet Union acting in collusion," it said.

Possession of guided missiles and nuclear weapons "is a great encouragement to the heroic Vietnamese people who are waging a war of resistance against U.S. aggression and for national salvation and to all the revolutionary peoples of the world who are now engaged in heroic struggles, as well as a new contribution to the defense of world peace," the broadcast continued.

Fire Makes Big Smoke

A cloud of black smoke billowed from the center of the downtown area during the noon hour today in Sikeston.

A tar cooker used by construction workers building an addition to the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company overheated and the tar caught fire.

Firemen extinguished the blaze in about five minutes.

Johnson Requests Support

BANHKOK, Thailand AP -- "We want to end this war today -- we want to end it this hour," President Johnson declared today.

In a report to the United States on his visit to Viet Nam, the President said it is now up to the other side to respond to the peace offer made by the allies at the Manila conference on Viet Nam.

"We must continue to resist the aggression that threatens South Viet Nam" until it ceases, Johnson said, adding that the United States is fighting because "the Communists will unbolt the door to peace only when they are convinced their military campaign cannot succeed."

Johnson recorded his remarks in Manila just before he flew to Thailand on his Asian tour. They were designed as a report by the President and commander in chief to be broadcast nationally in the United States.

The President asked "for the understanding, the support and the prayers of our countrymen" for the GIs serving in Viet Nam.

"Those men have pledged their lives," he said. "As your representative, I pledged that we will not fail them."

The presidential statement was issued by the traveling White House press office at Bangkok while Johnson and his wife were spending the night at a seaside resort 68 miles southeast of the Thai capital.

Johnson combined his observations on his trip to the battle zone with an appraisal of the conference just ended in Manila of the chiefs of the seven nations with troops fighting the Communists in South Viet Nam.

Concerning the summit parley, the President praised it as "a witness of our unity" in wanting to curb aggression and

Child's Dream Realized

Mimi Allen and Harp old Friends

By Barbara Lacy

"I'm going to be harpist when I grow up," the dark headed little girl with the snappy bright eyes told everyone.

"How nice," they answered, just as they said "how nice" to other little girls, who wanted to be movie stars or queens or anything else that seemed out of reach.

"It was like wanting to be an astronaut," the grown-up little girl says today. "I didn't have a harp: If I did, how could I take lessons? There was no harpist in the Sikeston area. I don't even know why I said that I wanted to be a harpist."

But her word of mouth advertising paid off.

Today Sikeston residents know Mimi Allen, or Mrs. Kenneth Smitten, to be the top in her profession. They are accustomed to seeing her name in the Daily Standard as she prepares for a tour, cuts a record, or makes a television show such as the CBS George Gershwin special last summer.

Some probably remember her mother as a fine pianist, and Mimi herself giving her first piano radio concert when she was five.

Some probably remember her saying, "I want to be a harpist."

Sitting in her black, white and gold study, she runs her hand fondly over her first harp; mottled gold metal, curvy, almost 100 years old. Silhouetted against a black and white wire fence designed papered wall are two harps, one old and one new. The second is black lacquer and golden wood, starkly angular, the first new harp design in 60 years. Mrs. Smitten says proudly that she was asked to test this new design before it was patented.

Opposite the harps, above a white sofa, on a white wall, is a picture gallery; studies of Mrs. Smitten at the harp, taken by Charles Galloway. On the right, beside the door leading into the Smitten's gold and white bedroom is a small Byzantine panel of an angel playing a harp. Nestled among the papers on the clean-cut black and white desk is a small round clock set in a brass wire harp-shaped frame.

"It was on my fifteenth birthday," she continues, refocusing attention on the harps, "that a man appeared with a harp. Actually he was a distant relative. His sister had played the harp many years before, although no one had touched it in years. It was in terrible condition, dusty, dirty and it had no strings. We sent it to Chicago to be restrung."

She paused. "So I had a harp. Next I had to find a teacher."

Her parents decided to send her to Stephens College in Columbia, at that time a high school and junior college. They felt it would be stimulating for Mimi, who, for the first time didn't want to practice the piano.

Stephens was not only a stimulus but a stepboard. Mimi swept through the four-year curriculum in three years, picking up two scholarships for further study on the way.

At 18 she was in New York City studying piano and harp privately and picking up extra courses at the Julliard School of Music. At 20 she started her concert career, playing with the New York symphony, touring, teaching. At 22 she became one of the youngest to appear in "Who's Who in International Music."

One would say Mimi Allen was devoting her life to her harp.

"Oh no, I wouldn't have wanted that," she says emphatically, "I lived in New York six years and all I did was play the harp. I had no time for myself, no time to create."

After marrying Smitten, who wasn't a musician but an agricultural engineer from San Francisco, family business called Mimi back to Sikeston. And the Smitten's stayed.

Mimi began freelancing, picking and choosing concerts to give, tours to make. She considers herself a commuter. She has toured the 48 continental states, Mexico, pre-Castro Cuba, Canada and Italy, giving concerts, cutting records, making television appearances, teaching, and writing and performing scores for movies. Thus a part-time career has given Mrs. Smitten what she wanted: Time to immerse herself into every facet of the harp and rear a family. The Smitten's have a daughter, Linda, 16; and son, Tom, 13.

Although Mrs. Smitten says family interests predominate in the spacious house at 915 North Moore, one is never far from the influence of the harp.

Four things soften the severity of the white walls and upholstery and black lacquered furniture throughout the house: Harps, angels, candlesticks, and plants.

Sometimes the harps are solo, such as the miniature Italian harp, four inches high, on a bookshelf in the playroom. Others are clutched by angels.

There are Mexican angels, Italian angels, American angels; angels playing harps, angels flying, angels singley, in pairs and in groups. Angels float on the walls, meditate between books and pray on tabletops. There are angel candlesticks, including one from the altar of a bombed cathedral in Florence, Italy. Now restored, its three carved angel heads dominate a group of candlesticks on the low glass coffee table in the living room.

Short, tall, common or unusual, Mrs. Smitten mixes them uninhibited or uses them alone, like the tall Italian candlestick-compote on her black lacquered dining room table. Candlesticks have even invaded the Circus room, formerly a garage, now the children's rumpus room No harp or angels here, only a wrought iron Mexican trumpet player on the soda bar.

It, too, is softened by vines as is the dramatic stark interior of the house. There are no African violets on the window sills. Instead, plants are used boldly.

Majestic seven foot plants fill

At 20 she started her concert career, playing with the New York symphony, touring, teaching. At 22 she became one of the youngest to appear in "Who's Who in International Music."

One would say Mimi Allen was devoting her life to her harp.

"Oh no, I wouldn't have wanted that," she says emphatically, "I lived in New York six years and all I did was play the harp. I had no time for myself, no time to create."

After marrying Smitten, who wasn't a musician but an agricultural engineer from San Francisco, family business called Mimi back to Sikeston. And the Smitten's stayed.

Mimi began freelancing, picking and choosing concerts to give, tours to make. She considers herself a commuter. She has toured the 48 continental states, Mexico, pre-Castro Cuba, Canada and Italy, giving concerts, cutting records, making television appearances, teaching, and writing and performing scores for movies. Thus a part-time career has given Mrs. Smitten what she wanted: Time to immerse herself into every facet of the harp and rear a family. The Smitten's have a daughter, Linda, 16; and son, Tom, 13.

Although Mrs. Smitten says family interests predominate in the spacious house at 915 North Moore, one is never far from the influence of the harp.

Four things soften the severity of the white walls and upholstery and black lacquered furniture throughout the house: Harps, angels, candlesticks, and plants.

Sometimes the harps are solo, such as the miniature Italian harp, four inches high, on a bookshelf in the playroom. Others are clutched by angels.

There are Mexican angels, Italian angels, American angels; angels playing harps, angels flying, angels singley, in pairs and in groups. Angels float on the walls, meditate between books and pray on tabletops. There are angel candlesticks, including one from the altar of a bombed cathedral in Florence, Italy. Now restored, its three carved angel heads dominate a group of candlesticks on the low glass coffee table in the living room.

Short, tall, common or unusual, Mrs. Smitten mixes them uninhibited or uses them alone, like the tall Italian candlestick-compote on her black lacquered dining room table. Candlesticks have even invaded the Circus room, formerly a garage, now the children's rumpus room No harp or angels here, only a wrought iron Mexican trumpet player on the soda bar.

It, too, is softened by vines as is the dramatic stark interior of the house. There are no African violets on the window sills. Instead, plants are used boldly.

LABOR STRIFE AND THE PUBLIC INTEREST

The American public--still smarting from a year of turmoil on the labor-management front that caused several transport crises, killed a major city newspaper, shut down schools and hospitals in various communities and contributed to mounting inflationary pressures--faces a great deal more of the same during the 15 months ahead.

Next year more than two million workers will be involved in major contract negotiations, twice the number involved during 1966. Among unions which will launch contract talks before the end of 1967 are telephone workers, regional construction unions, all major rail unions, the Teamsters, auto workers in car, truck and farm machinery plants, rubber industry workers, and garment workers.

National concern focuses on two aspects of the labor picture. First, the settlements obtained by labor unions during the current year have gone well beyond what the government's economic advisers consider reasonable. If the trend continues, rising labor costs will feed the already worrisome inflation. Second, the 43-day tie-up of five major airlines by striking mechanics--and the union member's refusal to accept the first settlement agreed to by their leaders--revealed clearly how vulnerable the American economy is to strikes in vital areas.

The Johnson administration has denounced certain recent wage settlements as excessive. But the White House appears to be resigned to accepting annual increases of 5 to 6 per cent in the cost of wage and fringe benefit packages. Such boosts are above the 3.2 per cent average productivity increase--the President's noninflationary wage-price guidepost--but the alternative of direct wage and price controls is seen as "not needed" at the present time.

In dealing with strikes halting essential services (including transportation, or vital industrial production such as defense equipment), support for new legislation to prevent or end damaging walkouts appears to be growing. The failure of existing national emergency procedures to halt the airline mechanics' strike last summer raised questions about the effectiveness of present provisions for "cooling off" periods.

Under present law the President can, in disputes affecting rail and air transport, delay a strike for 60 days while an emergency board investigates and reports back to him with recommendations for a settlement. A similar "cooling off" period --but for 80 days--can be invoked under the Taft-Hartley Act in non-transport strikes which threaten the national health or safety. The Taft-Hartley emergency board, however, has no power to recommend details of a settlement.

After the "cooling off" period expires, workers are free to strike, as the airline mechanics did last summer. During that walkout, both the White House and Capitol Hill were reluctant to take responsibility for special legislation that would order the men back to work. With the strike almost a month old, the Senate approved such a bill but the House delayed. The strike finally was settled without legislation.

But the situation convinced a number of legislators that present national emergency provisions are inadequate. Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-N.Y.) has urged the Department of Labor to study existing procedures and recommend improvements to the next Congress. The New York Republican said that a general law is needed to prevent the passage of crisis bills in a heated atmosphere. Furthermore, he concluded, the study should be made now, "not a year from now when we are faced with other crippling strikes."

Proponents of changes in existing law point out that the government is extremely limited in the choice of procedures it may employ to combat emergency strikes. They urge that the President be given a variety of measures to use--including mediation, fact-finding, recommendations, temporary government operation of a facility, and strike injunctions with or without retroactive pay. Some labor experts want to levy heavy financial penalties on both unions and management in order to induce the parties to settle.

Most of the suggestions designed to seat the public interest at the bargaining table along with labor and management inevitably would involve a degree of encroachment on labor's ultimate right--the right to strike. Organized labor is already girding for the attack.

WOOD TO WARM YOUR HEARTH

A cheery blaze in a fireplace is truly a comfort on a cold winter evening. But the logs must burn well, or the friendly fireside turns into a disappointment. Your success with an open hearth depends not only on how you lay the fire, but also on the kind of wood you use.

Your wood should be dry. Keep the supply under cover; a tarpaulin or roofing paper will protect a woodpile out in the open. Most wood must be well seasoned. Green woods cause sparks, and their tars and resins clog the flue. Avoid buying very small logs, but don't use chunks so big that there's no air space around them at the sides of the hearth.

When laying the fire, first put crumpled newspaper in the grate, and lay chips or kindling over it. Then place the logs horizontally on top. Don't pile the wood too high, or the heat will be forced up the chimney, not out into the room.

When choosing logs for your fireplace, keep in mind that various kinds of woods have their special merits and drawbacks. Ash is excellent, and so are beech and chestnut, which light easily. Oak and holly are good; they burn slowly and give a hot fire. Pine is quick-burning and provides a hot fire, but is inclined to spark. Poplar, too, sputters if it is not seasoned for about a year. Spruce also throws out sparks. Elm, on the other hand, does not spark, but it takes a long time to ignite. Among other woods that make good fires - but they're hard to obtain - are hickory, yew, laurel, and mulberry.

For a fire with fragrance, try the junipers, Cedar of Lebanon, and wood from fruit trees-apple, plum, and pear. If you are unable to get woods with attractive aromas, add pine cones (gathered in the fall) to any wood fire.

Your own experience - and experiments - will be your most reliable guide in choosing wood, but you might like to remember this old English rhyme that sums up the fire-wood story:

Beech wood fires are bright and clear
If the logs are kept a year
Chestnut's only good, they say,
If for long it's laid away
Birch and fir logs burn too fast
Blaze up bright and do not last
It is by the Irish said
Hawthorn bakes the sweetest bread
Elm wood burns like a churchyard mould
E'en the very flames are cold
Poplar gives a bitter smoke
Fills your eyes and makes you choke
Apple wood will scent your room
With an incense like perfume
Oaken logs, if dry and old
Keep away the winter cold
But ash wood wet and ash wood dry
A king shall warm his slippers by.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO PICK UP THE BALL FOR CANDIDATES OPPOSED TO COMPULSORY UNIONISM.

In political contests all across the country union officials are again quietly going about their business of working for the election of anti-Right to Work candidates. The repeal of 14 (b) and thus the elimination of state Right to Work laws continues to be their No. 1 objective but, as in 1964, they seek to win key elections without provoking a public controversy over the issue.

This technique worked in 1964. But it will not work this time - IF we have learned our lesson. Every candidate - for the state legislature, Governor and the U. S. Congress - must be called upon (repeatedly, if necessary) to clearly state how he stands on the issue of a citizen's Right to Work for a living, free of any organized compulsion. The 14 (b) repeal battle in Congress proved conclusively that when the issue is thoroughly aired, Americans strongly oppose compulsory unionism. But the candidates cannot go it alone. It is up to you to show the champions of the Right to Work principle that the people's basic belief in freedom can be converted into effective action. Our "good guys" need militant, organized and articulate spokesmen. And they need, as one Midwestern Congressman frankly told us recently "support by stalwart constituents in a practical financial fashion." If we intend to whittle down the number of "rubber stamps" in Congress who have demonstrated their willingness to vote a workingman's freedom out of existence you must actively and openly support the "good guys."

Given the proper support more and more candidates will echo the words of Rep. Laurence J. Burton (R-Utah) who said recently, "if my opponent thinks I'm going to permit him to waltz around the District without taking a stand on the issue, then he's mistaken. I intend to pin him down on our Right to Work law and 14 (b)!"

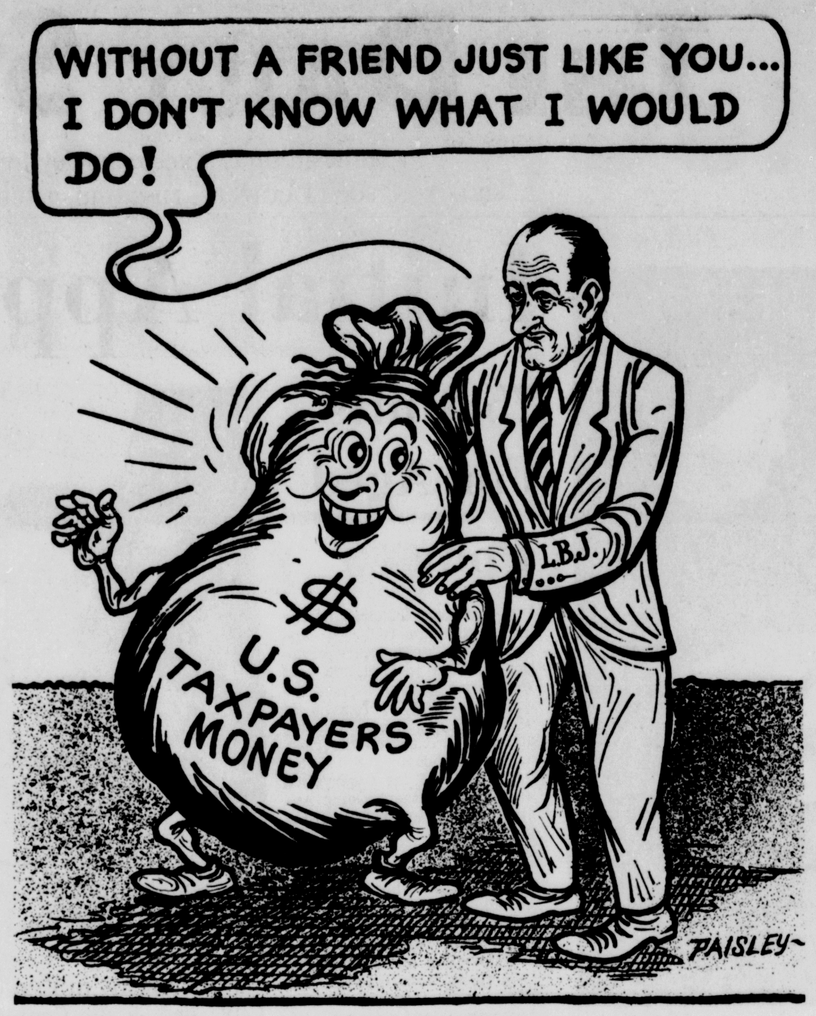

The defeat of Senator Ross Bass in Tennessee is a striking indication that the voters across the nation are determined to break the stranglehold of dictatorial labor union officials on the U. S. Congress and many of our state legislatures. Mr. Bass has learned his lesson and other politicians are becoming increasingly aware of the political hazards of knuckling under to the union hierarchy.

The National Right to Work Committee has been working for many months with bi-partisan groups in a number of key states to maintain and expand public awareness of 14 (b) and Right to Work as a means of helping to insure the nomination and election of candidates who will stand fast against compulsory unionism.

But our role is very definitely not partisan political activity or endorsement of candidates or the use of any of our resources in the election of candidates.

Our role is to help create a national climate in which candidates will find it to their advantage to stand up for voluntarism in union membership. It will be up to you to create a favorable local climate for Right to Work. It will be up to you to provide the facts and figures, arguments and answers which will make it easier for the "good guys" to champion Right to Work. It will be up to you to financially support and to join in the campaign organizations of candidates who oppose forced unionism.

The National Right to Work Committee stands ready to help you help the Right to Work "good guys". Our new ACTION KITS and other educational materials will provide you with suggestions on how to help, facts and figures to prove your case, the arguments and the answers. But if the champions of Right to Work are to win in November you must now pick up the ball and start running - hard. It will be a tough battle, but with the help of an aroused citizenry defending a principle in which it wholeheartedly believes the advocates of compulsion can be beaten.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Before Ronald Reagan, the charming Hollywood actor, was nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor of California, certain GOP leaders had prepared an amazing dossier on his past. They feared that Reagan was too politically unstable to lead the state.

Since then the research on Reagan's past record has been hushed up. There has been some backstage discussion among some California Republicans as to whether it should be published, but the decision so far has been negative.

Among the Republicans who have their fingers crossed about Reagan are former Governor Goodwin Knight, Sen. Tom Kuchel, ex - mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, and Joseph Shell, candidate for Governor in 1962 and Republican leader of the California assembly.

Their skepticism is based partly on his lack of experience, partly on the fact that he once teamed up with extreme leftists, now is backed by extreme rightists. They wonder whether, if elected, he would prove to be a "revolving door" governor, given to sudden policy reversals.

This column has now obtained a copy of the Republican research on Reagan. And since he is running for the governorship of the nation's most populous state, with plans -- according to backers -- of going on to the White House, the public certainly has a right to know all this background.

THE REAGAN RECORD

Here, therefore, are the most important excerpts from the Reagan dossier which Republican leaders prepared but have not used:

On Sept. 7, 1946, Reagan was billed by the Peoples World, organ of the Communist party on the West Coast, as the star in "Operation Terror," a series of 13 weekly broadcasts "sponsored by mobilization for democracy," produced with the cooperation of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The Mobilization for Democracy is listed by the House un-American Activities Committee, page 220 of its 1961 report, as follows:

"Created by California Communists since 1945. It is a Communist - inspired and donimated organization, carefully window-dressed and directed and engaged in inciting riots, racial hatred, and disrespect for law and order. It is one of the 'key' Communist fronts in California."

The Hollywood Writers Mobilizations is described by the California State Senate un-American Activities Comtee, page 258 of its 1958 report, as follows:

"The committee has reported on this Communist front, Hollywood Writers Mobilization, at some length in its 1945 report. It should be stated here that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is a direct successor of the Pacific Coast Branch of the League of American Writers, Communist front for literary Communist and Communist fellow-travelers. The name Hollywood Writers Mobilization was assumed shortly after the Stalin - Hitler Pact was ended by Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union, 6-22-41. It went into frenzied activity following the attack on Pearl Harbor. It should be pointed out that the record proves that the "patriotism" indicated on the part of the leaders of this Communist front organization was dependent upon their secret loyalty to the Soviet Union."

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization was also cited as "subversive and Communist" by Attorney General Tom Clark, December, 1947, and September, 1948.

CHANGEABLE CANDIDATE

The above highlights the most significant point in the career of candidate Reagan, namely the complete reversal of his position. "Operation Terror," the program in which he starred in 1946, was an expose of the persecution of southern Negroes who voted for the first time. It was a vigorous defense of civil rights.

Today, on contrast, Reagan is proud of the awards he has received from segregationist governors Ross Barnett of Mississippi, Orval Farbus of Arkansas, and from the right - wing citizens for constutitional government. He has been opposed to open housing and is cashing in, politically, on the white blacklash resulting from various civil rights disturbances on the West Coast.

Republican skeptics in California wonder if Reagan will change again.

They have also dug up a significant item from the Communist Peoples World, Feb. 26, 1946, reporting that Ronald Reagan was a sponsor of the "Los Angeles committee for a Democratic Far Eastern policy," which charged that "U. S. Foreign Policy in Asia is sowing the seeds of a third world war," and urged "the removal of troops from China."

A large body of American public opinion today agrees that Mr. Reagan was probably right in 1946 and that if we had not boycotted the Chinese after that we would not be confronted with a solidly Communist China today, determined either to take over Viet Nam or to keep us continually fighting a divisive and debilitating war.

But Reagan, who may have been right in 1946, has gone into a complete reverse in 1966, and has lined up with the McCarthyites, the John Birchers and the ultra - rightists who braded as Communists such men as Gen. George Marshall, former Ambassador to China, and the state department officials whom Sen. Joseph McCarthy forced into retirement, because they took the same position as Ronald Reagan in 1946.

On Halloween millions of American Trick or Treaters will share in UNICEF's Nobel Peace Prize. Their fun will save other children's lives.

COMMUNIST NUMBERS GAME

The U. S. Department of State reported recently that the membership of communist parties in non - communist countries has dropped sharply within the last year. The department reported significant declines in membership in West Germany, Mexico and Iraq. The communist party was outlawed in Indonesia early this year and also has been outlawed or weakened in several African countries.

In all, according to the report, official communist party losses in non - communist contries has reduced a 1965 membership of 4.5 million of 2.6 million in 1966.

Every communist loss is a free world gain, but we must keep firmly in mind that a numbers game estimate of Communist effectiveness can be highly deceptive --and therefore highly dangerous. That was true at the time of the collapse of the Romanoff regime in pre-Soviet Russia, and it is true today.

When Lenin and Trotsky returned to Russia to plot the overthrow of the Kerensky government, they had very few followers to command. Lenin himself was never an adovate of mass- membership parties. He depended on a strictly trained inner core of dedicated professionals who were willing to wait for decades if necesary to take advantage of a collapse of law and order.

The communists are crafty and adept in getting non-party members to do their work. An example is the way they are relying, in the United States and elsewhere, on dissenting "intellectuals" to carry on their propaganda war against the U. S. effort to defeat communist aggression in Vietnam. It does not take many bad apples to ruin the barrel. HLH.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Big National Laborers' Union, Controlled by Same President For 40 Years, Ducks Probe of Mafia Invasion.

WASHINGTON, D.C. - For 40 years one of America's noblemen, Joseph V. Moreschi, a mysterious chap, has been in a rut. But he likes being there, It is a gold-plated rut from which he draws over $1,000 a week for a few days' work a year.

At 86, Moreschi is the land's oldest union president--a title he seems destined to hold until the age of 91, for he was just chosen to lead his organization once more.

Even in the period of the pachyderms, this is an awesome record since he took office back in 1926--just about the time President Calvin Coolidge decided not to run again.

Mr. Moreschi is General President of the Laborers' International Union of North America, which wound up its 15th convention in St. Louis last week. Apparently he is as imperturbable as he is tottering for neither he nor the more stalwart $55,000-a-year General Secretary-Treasurer Peter Fosco made any public move to look into murder and charges of Mafia control which have been stirring things inside one of the Laborer's biggest locals.

This affiliate is the 1,500-member local 13, headquartered in Long Island City (N. Y.). The Laborers' International convention received many stirring reports of progress in membership, money and, characteristically, of the majestic goals of the Laborers' Political Action League's efforts to improve society.

These were submitted, for the most part, by the national offices headed by General President Moreschi, holder of card number one, in local one, Chicago.

But a search of these reports and subsequent records--and a full week's efforts to contact the tottering wraithlike General President - and a full week's efforts to contact the tottering President or his aides--disclosed no effective action against the forces invading the big Long Island City local.

Why? Why was so little done when the union's secretary-treasurer, George Cervone, was shot in the back over the July 4th weekend as he slept in his cottage?

Why did not the national union heed previous stories and warnings which came in the form of sniper's bullets? Why was there no immediate action to protect Local 13 by the convention--which opened on Oct. 17, just about the moment the local was being openly charged with Mafia domination?

There are over 500,000 members of the Laborers' International--hardworking tunnel diggers, compressed air handlers, street pavers, asphalt specialists and ditch diggers-who should know that there is a police affidavit which states that a business agent of the same local was put into office through the influence of Mike Miranda. The latter heap of manicured muscle is part of the Tommy (Three-Finger Brown) Luchese Cosa Nostra combine, according to the authorities.

The business agent involved in this affidavit, which was handed to a Supreme Court Justice, is Basil (Bob) Cervone. The same document charges that Cervone--now out of office--paid the Mafia's Miranda $1,200 monthly.

This local has been under suspicion for several years now. Yet it is still affiliated with the Laborers' International.

This is '66, not '26, the year Joe Moreschi was first sworn into office. There should be no place for snarling, contemptous local and national officials who either smash down the phone receiver or just disappear when approached for information.

The Laborers' International (last known as the Hod Carriers) now is a big enterprise. It has an income of some $29 million annually.

In the pension funds of 142 of its locals is a total of $132 million (as of 1965).

Moreschi, who submitted the officers' report to the recent national convention (now held once every five years instead of every three decades) lives in the Southwest. He rarely gets into Washington--and then mostly for board meetings.

The International has a full-time lobbyist, and two full-time officials pressuring the Congress.

The union speaks grandly in the name of the half a million men. Yet on Long Island 1,500 of their brothers appear to have no spokesman of their own.

Is it because a tottering old man, more ghostly than his writers, has controlled the International for almost half a century?

Javits (R-N.Y.) has urged the Department of Labor to study existing procedures and recommend improvements to the next Congress. The New York Republican said that a general law is needed to prevent the passage of crisis bills in a heated atmosphere. Furthermore, he concluded, the study should be made now, "not a year from now when we are faced with other crippling strikes."

Proponents of changes in existing law point out that the government is extremely limited in the choice of procedures it may employ to combat emergency strikes. They urge that the President be given a variety of measures to use--including mediation, fact-finding, recommendations, temporary government operation of a facility, and strike injunctions with or without retroactive pay. Some labor experts want to levy heavy financial penalties on both unions and management in order to induce the parties to settle.

Most of the suggestions designed to seat the public interest at the bargaining table along with labor and management inevitably would involve a degree of encroachment on labor's ultimate right--the right to strike. Organized labor is already girding for the attack.

WOOD TO WARM YOUR HEARTH

A cheery blaze in a fireplace is truly a comfort on a cold winter evening. But the logs must burn well, or the friendly fireside turns into a disappointment. Your success with an open hearth depends not only on how you lay the fire, but also on the kind of wood you use.

Your wood should be dry. Keep the supply under cover; a tarpaulin or roofing paper will protect a woodpile out in the open. Most wood must be well seasoned. Green woods cause sparks, and their tars and resins clog the flue. Avoid buying very small logs, but don't use chunks so big that there's no air space around them at the sides of the hearth.

When laying the fire, first put crumpled newspaper in the grate, and lay chips or kindling over it. Then place the logs horizontally on top. Don't pile the wood too high, or the heat will be forced up the chimney, not out into the room.

When choosing logs for your fireplace, keep in mind that various kinds of woods have their special merits and drawbacks. Ash is excellent, and so are beech and chestnut, which light easily. Oak and holly are good; they burn slowly and give a hot fire. Pine is quick-burning and provides a hot fire, but is inclined to spark. Poplar, too, sputters if it is not seasoned for about a year. Spruce also throws out sparks. Elm, on the other hand, does not spark, but it takes a long time to ignite. Among other woods that make good fires - but they're hard to obtain - are hickory, yew, laurel, and mulberry.

For a fire with fragrance, try the junipers, Cedar of Lebanon, and wood from fruit trees-apple, plum, and pear. If you are unable to get woods with attractive aromas, add pine cones (gathered in the fall) to any wood fire.

Your own experience - and experiments - will be your most reliable guide in choosing wood, but you might like to remember this old English rhyme that sums up the fire-wood story:

Beech wood fires are bright and clear
If the logs are kept a year
Chestnut's only good, they say,
If for long it's laid away
Birch and fir logs burn too fast
Blaze up bright and do not last
It is by the Irish said...
Hawthorn bakes the sweetest bread
Elm wood burns like a churchyard mould
E'en the very flames are cold
Poplar gives a bitter smoke
Fills your eyes and makes you choke
Apple wood will scent your room
With an incense like perfume
Oaken logs, if dry and old
Keep away the winter cold
But ash wood wet and ash wood dry
A king shall warm his slippers by.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR YOU TO PICK UP THE BALL FOR CANDIDATES OPPOSED TO COMPULSORY UNIONISM.

In political contests all across the country union officials are again quietly going about their business of working for the election of anti-Right to Work candidates. The repeal of 14 (b) and thus the elimination of state Right to Work laws continues to be their No. 1 objective but, as in 1964, they seek to win key elections without provoking a public controversy over the issue.

This technique worked in 1964. But it will not work this time - IF we have learned our lesson. Every candidate - for the state legislature, Governor and the U. S. Congress - must be called upon (repeatedly, if necessary) to clearly state how he stands on the issue of a citizen's Right to Work for a living, free of any organized compulsion. The 14 (b) repeal battle in Congress proved conclusively that when the issue is thoroughly aired, Americans strongly oppose compulsory unionism. But the candidates cannot go it alone. It is up to you to show the champions of the Right to Work principle that the people's basic belief in freedom can be converted into effective action. Our "good guys" need militant, organized and articulate spokesmen. And they need, as one Midwestern Congressman frankly told us recently "support by stalwart constituents in a practical financial fashion." If we intend to whittle down the number of "rubber stamps" in Congress who have demonstrated their willingness to vote a workingman's freedom out of existence you must actively and openly support the "good guys."

Given the proper support more and more candidates will echo the words of Rep. Laurence J. Burton (R-Utah) who said recently, "if my opponent thinks I'm going to permit him to waltz around the District without taking a stand on the issue, then he's mistaken. I intend to pin him down on our Right to Work law and 14 (b)!"

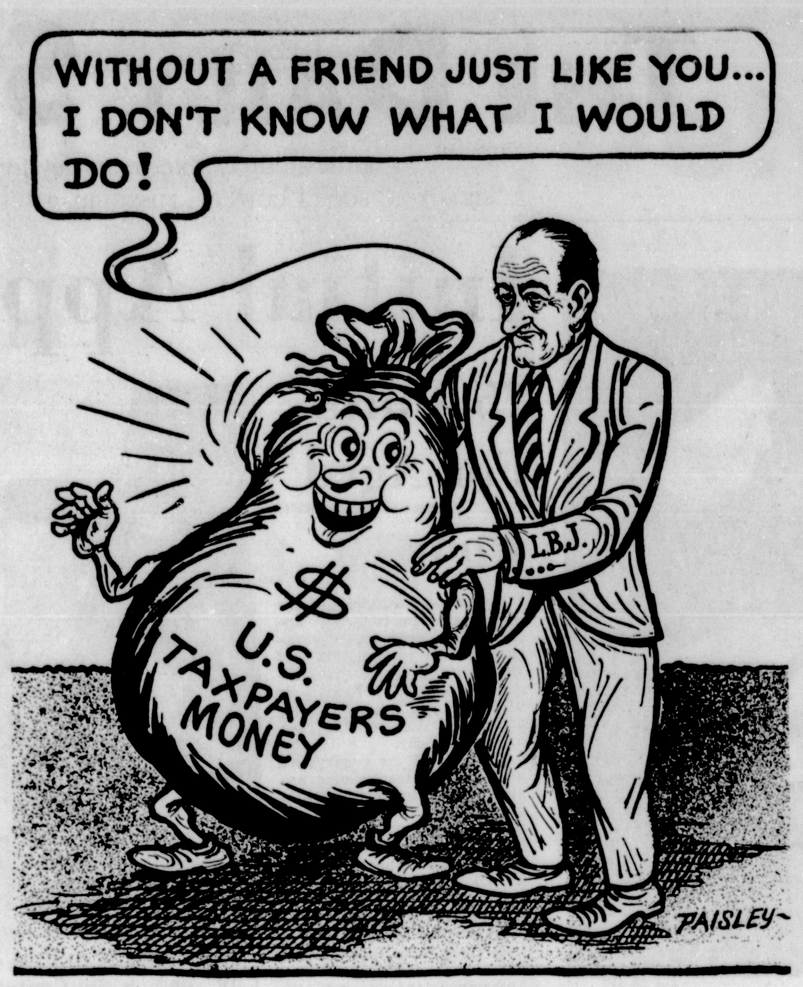

The defeat of Senator Ross Bass in Tennessee is a striking indication that the voters across the nation are determined to break the stranglehold of dictatorial labor union officials on the U. S. Congress and many of our state legislatures. Mr. Bass has learned his lesson and other politicians are becoming increasingly aware of the political hazards of knuckling under to the union hierarchy.

The National Right to Work Committee has been working for many months with bi-partisan groups in a number of key states to maintain and expand public awareness of 14 (b) and Right to Work as a means of helping to insure the nomination and election of candidates who will stand fast against compulsory unionism.

But our role is very definitely not partisan political activity or endorsement of candidates or the use of any of our resources in the election of candidates.

Our role is to help create a national climate in which candidates will find it to their advantage to stand up for voluntarism in union membership. It will be up to you to create a favorable local climate for Right to Work. It will be up to you to provide the facts and figures, arguments and answers which will make it easier for the "good guys" to champion Right to Work. It will be up to you to financially support and to join in the campaign organizations of candidates who oppose forced unionism.

The National Right to Work Committee stands ready to help you help the Right to Work "good guys". Our new ACTION KITS and other educational materials will provide you with suggestions on how to help, facts and figures to prove your case, the arguments and the answers. But if the champions of Right to Work are to win in November you must now pick up the ball and start running - hard. It will be a tough battle, but with the help of an aroused citizenry defending a principle in which it wholeheartedly believes the advocates of compulsion can be beaten.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Before Ronald Reagan, the charming Hollywood actor, was nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor of California, certain GOP leaders had prepared an amazing dossier on his past. They feared that Reagan was too politically unstable to lead the state.

Since then the research on Reagan's past record has been hushed up. There has been some backstage discussion among some California Republicans as to whether it should be published, but the decision so far has been negative.

Among the Republicans who have their fingers crossed about Reagan are former Governor Goodwin Knight, Sen. Tom Kuchel, ex - mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, and Joseph Shell, candidate for Governor in 1962 and Republican leader of the California assembly.

Their skepticism is based partly on his lack of experience, partly on the fact that he once teamed up with extreme leftists, now is backed by extreme rightists. They wonder whether, if elected, he would prove to be a "revolving door" governor, given to sudden policy reversals.

This column has now obtained a copy of the Republican research on Reagan. And since he is running for the governorship of the nation's most populous state, with plans -- according to backers -- of going on to the White House, the public certainly has a right to know all this background.

THE REAGAN RECORD

Here, therefore, are the most important excerpts from the Reagan dossier which Republican leaders prepared but have not used:

On Sept. 7, 1946, Reagan was billed by the Peoples World, organ of the Communist party on the West Coast, as the star in "Operation Terror," a series of 13 weekly broadcasts "sponsored by mobilization for democracy," produced with the cooperation of the Hollywood Writers Mobilization.

The Mobilization for Democracy is listed by the House un-American Activities Committee, page 220 of its 1961 report, as follows:

"Created by California Communists since 1945. It is a Communist - inspired and dominated organization, carefully window-dressed and directed and engaged in inciting riots, racial hatred, and disrespect for law and order. It is one of the 'key' Communist fronts in California."

The Hollywood Writers Mobilizations is described by the California State Senate un-American Activities Comtee, page 258 of its 1958 report, as follows:

"The committee has reported on this Communist front, Hollywood Writers Mobilization, at some length in its 1945 report. It should be stated here that the Hollywood Writers Mobilization is a direct successor of the Pacific Coast Branch of the League of American Writers, Communist front for literary Communist and Communist fellow-travelers. The name Hollywood Writers Mobilization was assumed shortly after the Stalin - Hitler Pact was ended by Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union, 6-22-41. It went into frenzied activity following the attack on Pearl Harbor. It should be pointed out that the record proves that the "patriotism" indicated on the part of the leaders of this Communist front organization was dependent upon their secret loyalty to the Soviet Union."

The Hollywood Writers Mobilization was also cited as "subversive and Communist" by Attorney General Tom Clark, December, 1947, and September, 1948.

CHANGEABLE CANDIDATE

The above highlights the most significant point in the career of candidate Reagan, namely the complete reversal of his position. "Operation Terror," the program in which he starred in 1946, was an expose of the persecution of southern Negroes who voted for the first time. It was a vigorous defense of civil rights.

Today, on contrast, Reagan is proud of the awards he has received from segregationist governors Ross Barnett of Mississippi, Orval Farbus of Arkansas, and from the right - wing citizens for constutitional government. He has been opposed to open housing and is cashing in, politically, on the white blacklash resulting from various civil rights disturbances on the West Coast.

Republican skeptics in California wonder if Reagan will change again.

They have also dug up a significant item from the Communist Peoples World, Feb. 26, 1946, reporting that Ronald Reagan was a sponsor of the "Los Angeles committee for a Democratic Far Eastern policy," which charged that "U. S. Foreign Policy in Asia is sowing the seeds of a third world war," and urged "the removal of troops from China."

A large body of American public opinion today agrees that Mr. Reagan was probably right in 1946 and that if we had not boycotted the Chinese after that we would not be confronted with a solidly Communist China today, determined either to take over Viet Nam or to keep us continually fighting a divisive and debilitating war.

But Reagan, who may have been right in 1946, has gone into a complete reverse in 1966, and has lined up with the McCarthyites, the John Birchers and the ultra - rightists who braded as Communists such men as Gen. George Marshall, former Ambassador to China, and the state department officials whom Sen. Joseph McCarthy forced into retirement, because they took the same position as Ronald Reagan in 1946.

On Halloween millions of American Trick or Treaters will share in UNICEF's Nobel Peace Prize. Their fun will save other children's lives.

H. L. Hunt Says

COMMUNIST NUMBERS GAME

The U. S. Department of State reported recently that the membership of communist parties in non - communist countries has dropped sharply within the last year. The department reported significant declines in membership in West Germany, Mexico and Iraq. The communist party was outlawed in Indonesia early this year and also has been outlawed or weakened in several African countries.

In all, according to the report, official communist party losses in non - communist countries has reduced a 1965 membership of 4.5 million of 2.6 million in 1966.

Every communist loss is a free world gain, but we must keep firmly in mind that a numbers game estimate of Communist effectiveness can be highly deceptive --and therefore highly dangerous. That was true at the time of the collapse of the Romanoff regime in pre-Soviet Russia, and it is true today.

When Lenin and Trotsky returned to Russia to plot the overthrow of the Kerensky government, they had very few followers to command. Lenin himself was never an adovate of mass- membership parties. He depended on a strictly trained inner core of dedicated professionals who were willing to wait for decades if necesary to take advantage of a collapse of law and order.

The communists are crafty and adept in getting non-party members to do their work. An example is the way they are relying, in the United States and elsewhere, on dissenting "intellectuals" to carry on their propaganda war against the U. S. effort to defeat communist aggression in Vietnam. It does not take many bad apples to ruin the barrel. HLH.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

WASHINGTON, D.C. - For 40 years one of America's noblemen, Joseph V. Moreschi, a mysterious chap, has been in a rut. But he likes being there, It is a gold-plated rut from which he draws over $1,000 a week for a few days' work a year.

At 86, Moreschi is the land's oldest union president--a title he seems destined to hold until the age of 91, for he was just chosen to lead his organization once more.

Even in the period of the pachyderms, this is an awesome record since he took office back in 1926--just about the time President Calvin Coolidge decided not to run again.

Mr. Moreschi is General President of the Laborers' International Union of North America, which wound up its 15th convention in St. Louis last week. Apparently he is as imperturbable as he is tottering for neither he nor the more stalwart $55,000-a-year General Secretary-Treasurer Peter Fosco made any public move to look into murder and charges of Mafia control which have been stirring things inside one of the Laborer's biggest locals.

This affiliate is the 1,500-member local 13, headquartered in Long Island City (N. Y.). The Laborers' International convention received many stirring reports of progress in membership, money and, characteristically, of the majestic goals of the Laborers' Political Action League's efforts to improve society.

These were submitted, for the most part, by the national offices headed by General President Moreschi, holder of card number one, in local one, Chicago.

But a search of these reports and subsequent records--and a full week's efforts to contact the tottering wraithlike General President - and a full week's efforts to contact the tottering President or his aides--disclosed no effective action against the forces invading the big Long Island City local.

Why? Why was so little done when the union's secretary-treasurer, George Cervone, was shot in the back over the July 4th weekend as he slept in his cottage?

Why did not the national union heed previous stories and warnings which came in the form of sniper's bullets? Why was there no immediate action to protect Local 13 by the convention--which opened on Oct. 17, just about the moment the local was being openly charged with Mafia domination?

There are over 500,000 members of the Laborers' International--hardworking tunnel diggers, compressed air handlers, street pavers, asphalt specialists and ditch diggers--who should know that there is a police affidavit which states that a business agent of the same local was put into office through the influence of Mike Miranda. The latter heap of manicured muscle is part of the Tommy (Three-Finger Brown) Luchese Cosa Nostra combine, according to the authorities.

The business agent involved in this affidavit, which was handed to a Supreme Court Justice, is Basil (Bob) Cervone. The same document charges that Cervone--now out of office--paid the Mafia's Miranda $1,200 monthly.

This local has been under suspicion for several years now. Yet it is still affiliated with the Laborers' International.

This is '66, not '26, the year Joe Moreschi was first sworn into office. There should be no place for snarling, contemptuous local and national officials who either smash down the phone receiver or just disappear when approached for information.

The Laborers' International (last known as the Hod Carriers) now is a big enterprise. It has an income of some $29 million annually.

In the pension funds of 142 of its locals is a total of $132 million (as of 1965).

Moreschi, who submitted the officers' report to the recent national convention (now held once every five years instead of every three decades) lives in the Southwest. He rarely gets into Washington--and then mostly for board meetings.

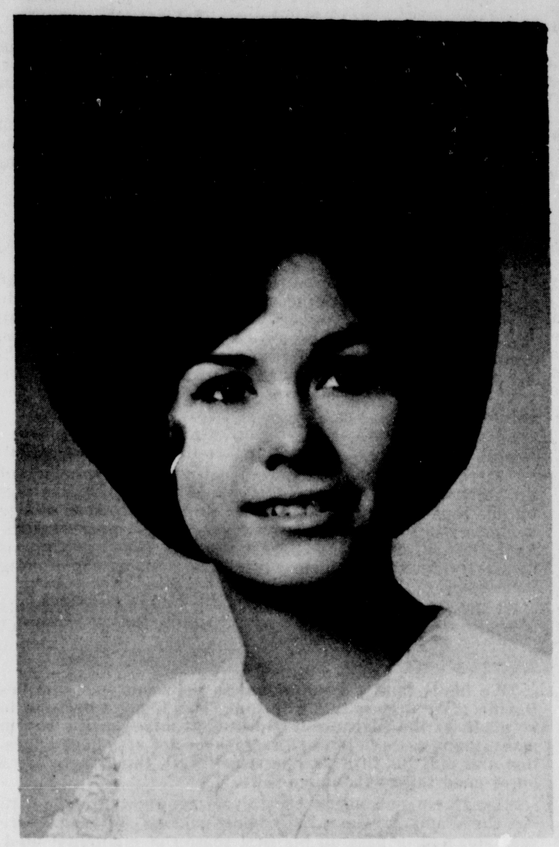

The International has a full-time lobbyist, and two full-time officials pressuring the Congress.

The union speaks grandly in the name of the half a million men. Yet on Long Island 1,500 of their brothers appear to have no spokesman of their own.

Is it because a tottering old man, more ghostly than his writers, has controlled the International for almost half a century?

Producers Say Housewife Boycotting Wrong Party

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The housewife is wrong," the president of Campbell Soup Co. said this week.

The president, W.B. Murphy, took issue with housewives across the country who are boycotting supermarkets to protest rising prices.

The presidents of the National Association of Food Chains, and Libby McNeil & Libby, a food packer, also took issue with the housewives.

"The food store is a handy goat for the housewife, but the housewife is wrong," Murphy said. "The guilty party is the rising economy, with its rising cost pressures."

Housewives outraged by rising food prices should be taking out their anger on the Johnson administration, not boycotting food stores, Robert L. Gibson Jr., president of Libby, said.

Gibson said the federal government's curtailment of the use of farm laborers from Mexico had raised costs.

Farmers who couldn't get labor to harvest their lettuce turned to machines. They didn't plant as much lettuce, switching to other crops easier to harvest with machines.

This summer, lettuce jumped to 39 cents a head.

Wages also have added to costs.

There are other factors, too—things as distant as a freeze in Idaho.

The price of potatoes increased this week after bad weather in Idaho.

The price of bread went up this summer after millers raised the price of flour, blaming higher wheat prices. Wheat prices went up following a smaller-than-usual wheat crop and greater export demand.

Supply and demand also have been big factors in prices this year.

Pork went up about 30 per cent between October 1964 and March 1966, as farmers cut production because of low hog prices earlier.

Last March, retail meat prices were the highest in history. Then more pork moved to market, along with more beef, more chickens and more turkeys.

This week, a major supermarket chain in the New York area is selling pork chops for 79 cents a pound — down 30 cents.

Prices are likely to be lower through Thanksgiving, and then turn up a bit in December, reflecting the holiday demand for hams.

Wholesale butter prices have dropped more than 8 cents this month as supplies increased slightly and consumer resistance to high prices was felt.

Grapefruit prices fell this week as increased shipments from Florida reached the market.

Producers Say Housewife Boycotting Wrong Party

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "The housewife is wrong," the president of Campbell Soup Co. said this week.

The president, W.B. Murphy, took issue with housewives across the country who are boycotting supermarkets to protest rising prices.

The presidents of the National Association of Food Chains, and Libby McNeil & Libby, a food packer, also took issue with the housewives.

"The food store is a handy goat for the housewife, but the housewife is wrong," Murphy said. "The guilty party is the rising economy, with its rising cost pressures."

Housewives outraged by rising food prices should be taking out their anger on the Johnson administration, not boycotting food stores, Robert L. Gibson Jr., president of Libby, said.

Gibson said the federal government's curtailment of the use of farm laborers from Mexico had raised costs.

Farmers who couldn't get labor to harvest their lettuce turned to machines. They didn't plant as much lettuce, switching to other crops easier to harvest with machines.

This summer, lettuce jumped to 39 cents a head.

Wages also have added to costs.

There are other factors, too—things as distant as a freeze in Idaho.

The price of potatoes increased this week after bad weather in Idaho.

The price of bread went up this summer after millers raised the price of flour, blaming higher wheat prices. Wheat prices went up following a smaller-than-usual wheat crop and greater export demand.

Supply and demand also have been big factors in prices this year.

Pork went up about 30 per cent between October 1964 and March 1966, as farmers cut production because of low hog prices earlier.

Last March, retail meat prices were the highest in history. Then more pork moved to market, along with more beef, more chickens and more turkeys.

This week, a major supermarket chain in the New York area is selling pork chops for 79 cents a pound — down 30 cents.

Prices are likely to be lower through Thanksgiving, and then turn up a bit in December, reflecting the holiday demand for hams.

Wholesale butter prices have dropped more than 8 cents this month as supplies increased slightly and consumer resistance to high prices was felt.

SLICK BALL-HANDLING

Indians Host Miners In Homecoming Tilt

CAPE GIRARDEAU - The Southeast Missouri State College football Indians hope that the Homecoming spirit here this weekend will give them a boost in their Saturday contest with the Miners of University of Missouri Rolla.

Game time for the Homecoming tilt is 2 p.m. (CDT) in Houck Stadium.

The game figures to be an aerial circus, with two of the most prolific passers in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) pitted against each other.

Southeast's Greg Brune currently leads the league in passing yardage and in completion percentage. The junior quarterback has hit on 62 121 passes for 1231 yards, average of 51 percent.

Cape's great split end, senior Chuck Koerner, has the top reception yardage in the MIAA with 510, on 16 catches. The Koerner threat has forced opposing teams to counter with double and even triple coverage, opening up other Indian receivers.

Wingback John Diepenbrock, who has posed an equally serious threat for long yardage, has picked up big gains in the past two weeks, and now has 453 yards on 23 receptions, good for third in league rankings.

With deep receivers covered, Brune has found halfback Walt Smallwood and tight end Jim Gibbons open for 10 and 8 completions respectively, Smallwood for 140 yards and Gibbons for 106.

Smallwood, a sophomore speedster, leads the league in rushing yardage with 462, and in average per carry, 5.6.

The Miners' air game is engineered by quarterback Ronnie Lewis, who has put the ball in the air 194 times, more than any other passer in the conference, and who has completed 41 percent of his attempts.

Halfback Gene Ricker, a 140-pounder, is Lewis' favorite target, and leads the MIAA in number of passes caught, 33. Two fine ends, Bruce Starnes and Ron Boyer, complete a trio of targets for Lewis.

UMR runs what SEMO coach Kenney Knox describes as "one of the most deceptive we've seen." Knox said that he and his staff considered Miner fullback Bob Nicodemus and halfback Rich Erxleben as the best rushers on the squad.

The Rolla eleven, expected to be one of the most improved teams in the MIAA this year, has scored frequently, but has been beaten in four of six starts, including both league encounters to date. Last week, the Miners blew a three-touchdown lead and lost to Central Missouri by a 28-26 score.

The Indians, who had been figured to be at least a year away from title contention, are currently at the top of the standings along with Southwest Missouri. Both have won their opening two league games.

Southeast Missouri did it the hard way last week, coming back from a 21-0 deficit at Northwest Missouri to win 24-21. The winning margin was a 43-yard field goal by freshman Bruce Nall of Poplar Bluff with three seconds left in the game.

In that game, Knox credited his defensive unit, headed by tackle Paul Ebaugh and end Steve Jerabek, with an inspired second half effort that kept the Bearcats in check while the offense was catching up. Northwest scored all its points in the first 16 minutes of the game, each score following a Cape fumble deep in its own territory.

A-State Fifth In AP Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's no telling how high New Mexico Highlands will go in the Associated Press small-college poll if the Cowboys continue to ride roughshod over their opposition.

The Cowboys opened their season by trampling Hiram Scott 54-6. Then, they beat Colorado Mines 68-20, Panhandle A&M 69-13, Adams State 24-13, Ft. Lewis, Colo. 58-21 and last week Western New Mexico 73-21.

It has all resulted in a 6-0 record, a 57.7 points a game average and, for the first time this season, a place in the AP rankings.

The Cowboys took over the No. 10 spot in one of several changes after last week's games.

North Dakota State held first place in this week's balloting by a national panel of 17 sports writers and broadcasters. The Bisons, 18-15 winner over North Dakota last Saturday, had 11 votes for first place and 163 points on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc.

The setback dropped North Dakota from second to fourth place while idle San Diego State rushed up to replace the Sioux in the runner-up position.

Montana State advanced three places to third after defeating Weber State 45-36.

Arkansas State is the No. 5 team followed by Tennessee State, Middle Tennessee State, Northwestern State of Louisiana, Sul Ross State and New Mexico Highlands.

The top ten, with first place votes in parentheses and total points:

1.	North Dakota St. (11)	163
2.	San Diego State (2)	120
3.	Montana State	83
4.	North Dakota	82
5.	Arkansas St. (1)	77
6.	Tenn. State (1)	58
7.	Middle Tenn. (1)	57
8.	Northwestern, La.	39
9.	Sul Ross (1)	25
10.	New Mexico Highlands	23

All-Star Coach Named

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Clarence A. Muhn, a retired coach who led suburban University City to 20 football conference championships, was named Wednesday night as a head coach for the Missouri State High School All-Star football game Dec. 3.

Proceeds from the game, to be played in Busch Memorial Stadium, will go to the Salvation Army Capital Fund drive. Only those football stars who do not take part in winter sports will be chosen for the contest sponsored by the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It was announced earlier that Bob Davis, former suburban Ladue High School coach, would be the other head coach for the game.

Packer Player Needs

GREEN BAY, Wis. AP - Football fans, finding it difficult to secure tickets for Green Bay Packer games, found some degree of comfort in this advertisement in the Brown County Chronicle:

"PACKER PLAYER NEEDS - Packer tickets. Have several friends visiting from out of town for Nov. 6 Packer-Viking game in Green Bay. If you have tickets for sale, please call Henry Jordan."

Coach Jack Mitchell said J. C. Hixon may move to right corner back. Rich Abernethy, the regular cornerback, reported to the Wednesday practice complaing of soreness in his shoulder.

MANHATTAN — Coach Doug Weaver of Kansas State said defensive end Bill Kennedy and defensive tackle Vern Kraft, who have been hampered by injuries, should be ready for part-time duty Saturday against Kansas.

STILLWATER — Oklahoma State held an 85-minute, full-dress drill behind locked gates in preparation for Saturday's game against Iowa State. Coach Phil Cutchin said he thought it was a good workout. Some speedy freshmen were used to give the team a feel of Iowa State's fast striking offense.

AMES — Center Don Stanley, who has an injured knee, may not be ready for the game against Oklahoma State, Coach Clay Stapleton said. If Stanley doesn't play, Jon Lambi will take his place. Tight end George Maurer is expected to see some action. He has been out with a broken left arm.

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- If the toe is a decisive factor at Lincoln Saturday, Bill Bates of Missouri or Nebraska's Larry Wachholtz will wear the hero's toga.

Bates, a senior from Storm Lake, Ia., may feel it's his turn. Last year, Wachholtz provided the late heroics -- kicking a 26-yard field goal with six minutes to go. The Huskers won that won, 16-14.

Wachholtz, all - American safety in '65, was second nationally in punt returns. Bates is a punting -- place-kicking specialist whom Coach Dan Devine won't expose to the hazards of additional offensive combat.

Wachholtz has booted 13 of 15 conversions, and 4 of 6 field-goal tries. Bates is 10-for-10 in conversions, 4 for 10 in field goals.

Big Eight Briefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Around the Big Eight training sites:

LINCOLN—Injuries have put split end Dennis Richnafsky and halfback Ron Kirkland out of action for Saturday's game against Missouri. End Tom Penney, who has caught 10 passes for 140 yards, is expected to start.

NORMAN — Tailback Ron Shotts remains a doubtful starter against Boulder. Guard Ron Winfrey hurt his shoulder again and may not play, and linebacker Ricky Burgess reinjured his wrist and also is on the doubtful list.

COLUMBIA - Tackle Bill Powell and fullback Barry Lischner remain doubtful starters for the game in Lincoln against Nebraska. Both have knee injuries. Russ Washington, who returned to practice this week after recovering from a knee injury, will be unable to play, Coach Dan Devine said. The defensive end was checked Wednesday by a team of surgeons.

LAWRENCE—Junior Riggins may start at right halfback for Kansas against Kansas State.

Open Date Helps Football Clubs

NEW YORK (AP) — Does a pro football club gain or lose by an open date in the schedule? The records say it is 2-1 the team will win its next game after a bye.

Dallas sat out the opening week and then bombed New York 52-7. Chicago took a week off and sneaked past Minnesota 13-10. The Vikings came off a bye to ruin Los Angeles 35-7 and Cleveland took advantage of the extra week to upset Dallas 30-21.

San Francisco and Baltimore lost after the bye, making it 4-2 in favor of the idle clubs in National Football League play so far. Pittsburgh, off last Sunday, will put the percentage table to the test Sunday against Dallas.

In the American Football League the score is 6-3 making the overall pro total 10-5 in favor of the team with the bye. Buffalo is coming off a bye this Sunday when it plays the Jets at New York.

Time ran out for the Minnesota Vikings last Sunday with them trailing Baltimore 20-17 and the ball on the Colts' 25. Francis Tarkenton had just completed a pass to Tommy Mason for a three-yard gain with 21 seconds to go and time ran out before he could throw again or get the field goal unit on the field.

"If I had to do it over again I would have thrown out of bounds," said Tarkenton. "I still thought we had time enough after Mason caught the ball but we didn't line up quick enough and there was some confusion."

When the rookie of the year voting starts, the St. Louis Cardinals can put forth a strong candidate in halfback Johnny Roland. The former Missouri back has piled up a total of 841 yards with 327 rushing, 103 receiving, 227 on kickoff runbacks and 184 on punt returns. Rookie Roy Shivers of Utah State hasn't carried the ball on a play from scrimmage but has gained 554 yards, 430 of them on kickoff returns for the Cards.

Lamar Tech In Homeing Battle At Jonesboro

JONESBORO, ARK - Arkansas State's hopes for a Southland Conference title, and undefeated season and national prestige will have the most serious test of the year Saturday when Lamar Tech's powerful Cardinals invade Jonesboro with the intentions of wrecking A-State's Homecoming festivities.

A record crowd for Kays Stadium is expected for the 2 p.m. game, and Homecoming ceremonies will begin at 1:45. Miss Lynn Valenteen of Jonesboro will reign as queen.

A-State picked up its fifth win of the season Saturday topping Abilene Christian 33-22 in a sub-par performance. The Indians were outgained by the Wildcats, but they recovered three fumbles in Abilene territory and converted them into scores to take the victory.

Lamar has a 3-2 record, but their losses have been to powerful Western Michigan and SW Louisiana, the Gulf States Conference leader. Their wins have been impressive. They rolled over Southwest Missouri 55-12, and clobbered Abilene 42-16. Last week they topped McNeese State, defending GSC champ, 10-7.

The Cardinals have flown high on the passing arm of veteran Phil Primm. Against Abilene Primm, a two-time All-SLC pick, connected on 14 of 18 passes for 224 yards and four touchdowns. He is averaging over 200 yards per game total offense and has completed over 60 per cent of his passes.

The Cardinals also have such returnees as big Tom Smiley, a bone-crushing fullback who has been used mainly as Primm's body-guard on pass protection.

This will be the third encounter between the two teams, with Lamar winning last year's game 20-7 and edging the Indians out of a title in 1964 with a 7-7 tie. In each of the previous games A-State was considered the favorite, however, in Saturday's game the Indians will be at least a two-touchdown underdog.

Tickets for the game are on sale in several downtown Jonesboro locations, at the A-State Athletic Offices and at the ticket window at the stadium prior to the game.

'Red Shirts' in Fashion At Missouri University

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Sports Editor
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(NEA)—The "Red Shirt"—a tumorous outgrowth of big-time college football—has been examined thoroughly in the laboratory of coach Dan Devine of the University of Missouri and found harmless.

This, of course, doesn't agree with an earlier prognosis emanating from research institutions in the East and the Big Ten Conference. They consider the practice of playing fifth-year college students (an euphemism for "red shirts") a malignancy and simply cut it out, although the Big Ten relents in special cases.

"I think red-shirting has a certain stigma attached to it," admits Devine, "I don't really know why."

Well, yes, he does know why. It seems several years ago that a school in the Southeastern Conference (purported to be Mississippi) red-shirted its whole freshman team, indicating either 1) the fuzzy-faced yearlings were considered too young to be thrown into strenuous varsity competition, or 2) the school was so well-stocked in varsity talent already, it could afford to hold the frosh out as a reservoir for the future.

"A wholesale policy of laying out a whole freshman team," says Devine, "I suppose something would be wrong with that.

"At the University of Missouri we don't have a policy of red-shirting, but we do play a boy for three years if he lays out his sophomore year. I think about 75 per cent of college students will take more than four years to get their degrees. So I see nothing wrong with an athlete, who probably is forced to lower his academic load at certain periods, taking more than four years."

At Missouri, for instance, there are 12 engineering students who also want to play football, and the two elements aren't generally soluble. So by stretching out their academic careers, Devine can accommodate them in both goals.

"We never hold a boy out unless he wants to," specifies Devine. "We discuss this with him. This is not a decision to be made by the coaches. It's to the advantage of the boy in many, many cases to have an extra semester of college education and play his fifth year in school. So I think there are a lot of good things about red-shirting.

"Gary Lane, our quarterback a year ago (now a rookie with the Cleveland Browns), had mononucleosis his sophomore year and had to pass up his first season of eligibility. Red-shirting allowed him three years of competition, plus the fact he got his degree and went on to do some work toward a masters degree.

"I think people lose sight of the fact that college football's got to be for the player."

Of course, there's a school of thought that it's got to be for the coaches—their jobs are correlated to the won-lost record. Ergo, protests from many coaches in the East and the Big Ten that unfair competition results when they have to play schools which allow red-shirting.

SLICK BALL-HANDLING

Indians Host Miners In Homecoming Tilt

CAPE GIRARDEAU - The Southeast Missouri State College football Indians hope that the Homecoming spirit here this weekend will give them a boost in their Saturday contest with the Miners of University of Missouri Rolla.

Game time for the Homecoming tilt is 2 p.m. (CDT) in Houck Stadium.

The game figures to be an aerial circus, with two of the most prolific passers in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) pitted against each other.

Southeast's Greg Brune currently leads the league in passing yardage and in completion percentage. The junior quarterback has hit on 69 121 passes for 1231 yards, average of 51 percent.

Cape's great split end, senior Chuck Koerner, has the top reception yardage in the MIAA with 510, on 16 catches. The Koerner threat has forced opposing teams to counter with double and even triple coverage, opening up other Indian receivers.

Wingback John Diepenbrock, who has posed an equally serious threat for long yardage, has picked up big gains in the past two weeks, and now has 453 yards on 23 receptions, good for third in league rankings.

With deep receivers covered, Brune has found halfback Walt Smallwood and tight end Jim Gibbons open for 10 and 8 completions respectively, Smallwood for 140 yards and Gibbons for 106.

Smallwood, a sophomore speedster, leads the league in rushing yardage with 462, and in average per carry, 5.6.

The Miners' air game is engineered by quarterback Ronnie Lewis, who has put the ball in the air 194 times, more than any other passer in the conference, and who has completed 41 percent of his attempts.

Halfback Gene Ricker, a 140-pounder, is Lewis' favorite target, and leads the MIAA in number of passes caught, 33. Two fine ends, Bruce Starnes and Ron Boyer, complete a trio of targets for Lewis.

UMR runs what SEMO coach Kenney Knox describes as "one of the most deceptive we've seen." Knox said that he and his staff considered Miner fullback Bob Nicodemus and halfback Rich Erxleben as the best rushers on the squad.

The Rolla eleven, expected to be one of the most improved teams in the MIAA this year, has scored frequently, but has been beaten in four of six starts, including both league encounters to date. Last week, the Miners blew a three-touchdown lead and lost to Central Missouri by a 28-26 score.

The Indians, who had been figured to be at least a year away from title contention, are currently at the top of the standings along with Southwest Missouri. Both have won their opening two league games.

Southeast Missouri did it the hard way last week, coming back from a 21-0 deficit at Northwest Missouri to win 24-21. The winning margin was a 43-yard field goal by freshman Bruce Nall of Poplar Bluff with three seconds left in the game.

In that game, Knox credited his defensive unit, headed by tackle Paul Ebaugh and end Steve Jerabek, with an inspired second half effort that kept the Bearcats in check while the offense was catching up. Northwest scored all its points in the first 16 minutes of the game, each score following a Cape fumble deep in its own territory.

A-State Fifth In AP Poll

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's no telling how high New Mexico Highlands will go in the Associated Press small-college poll if the Cowboys continue to ride roughshod over their opposition.

The Cowboys opened their season by trampling Hiram Scott 54-6. Then, they beat Colorado Mines 68-20, Panhandle A&M 69-13, Adams State 24-13, Ft. Lewis, Colo. 58-21 and last week Western New Mexico 73-21.

It has all resulted in a 6-0 record, a 57.7 points a game average and, for the first time this season, a place in the AP rankings.

The Cowboys took over the No. 10 spot in one of several changes after last week's games.

North Dakota State held first place in this week's balloting by a national panel of 17 sports writers and broadcasters. The Bisons, 18-15 winner over North Dakota last Saturday, had 11 votes for first place and 163 points on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc.

The setback dropped North Dakota from second to fourth place while idle San Diego State rushed up to replace the Sioux in the runner-up position.

Montana State advanced three places to third after defeating Weber State 45-36.

Arkansas State is the No. 5 team followed by Tennessee State, Middle Tennessee State, Northwestern State of Louisiana, Sul Ross State and New Mexico Highlands.

The top ten, with first place votes in parentheses and total points:

1.	North Dakota St. (11)	163
2.	San Diego State (2)	120
3.	Montana State	83
4.	North Dakota	82
5.	Arkansas St. (1)	77
6.	Tenn. State (1)	58
7.	Middle Tenn. (1)	57
8.	Northwestern, La.	39
9.	Sul Ross (1)	25
10.	New Mexico Highlands	23

Big Eight Briefs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Around the Big Eight training sites:

LINCOLN—Injuries have put split end Dennis Richnafsky and halfback Ron Kirkland out of action for Saturday's game against Missouri. End Tom Penney, who has caught 10 passes for 140 yards, is expected to start.

NORMAN — Tailback Ron Shotts remains a doubtful starter against Boulder. Guard Ron Winfrey hurt his shoulder again and may not play, and linebacker Ricky Burgess reinjured his wrist and also is on the doubtful list.

COLUMBIA - Tackle Bill Powell and fullback Barry Lischner remain doubtful starters for the game in Lincoln against Nebraska. Both have knee injuries. Russ Washington, who returned to practice this week after recovering from a knee injury, will be unable to play, Coach Dan Devine said. The defensive end was checked Wednesday by a team of surgeons.

LAWRENCE—Junior Riggins may start at right halfback for Kansas against Kansas State. Coach Jack Mitchell said J. C. Hixon may move to right corner back. Rich Abernethy, the regular cornerback, reported to the Wednesday practice complaing of soreness in his shoulder.

MANHATTAN — Coach Doug Weaver of Kansas State said defensive end Bill Kennedy and defensive tackle Vern Kraft, who have been hampered by injuries, should be ready for part-time duty Saturday against Kansas.

STILLWATER — Oklahoma State held an 85-minute, full-dress drill behind locked gates in preparation for Saturday's game against Iowa State. Coach Phil Cutchin said he thought it was a good workout. Some speedy freshmen were used to give the team a feel of Iowa State's fast striking offense.

AMES — Center Don Stanley, who has an injured knee, may not be ready for the game against Oklahoma State, Coach Clay Stapleton said. If Stanley doesn't play, Jon Lambi will take his place. Tight end George Maurer is expected to see some action. He has been out with a broken left arm.

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- If the toe is a decisive factor at Lincoln Saturday, Bill Bates of Missouri or Nebraska's Larry Wachholtz will wear the hero's toga.

Bates, a senior from Storm Lake, Ia., may feel it's his turn. Last year, Wachholtz provided the late heroics -- kicking a 26-yard field goal with six minutes to go. The Huskers won that won, 16-14.

Wachholtz, all - American safety in '65, was second nationally in punt returns. Bates is a punting -- place-kicking specialist whom Coach Dan Devine won't expose to the hazards of additional offensive combat.

Wachholtz has booted 13 of 15 conversions, and 4 of 6 field-goal tries. Bates is 10-for-10 in conversions, 4 for 10 in field goals.

Packer Player Needs

GREEN BAY, Wis. AP - Football fans, finding it difficult to secure tickets for Green Bay Packer games, found some degree of comfort in this advertisement in the Brown County Chronicle:

"PACKER PLAYER NEEDS -Packer tickets. Have several friends visiting from out of town for Nov. 6 Packer-Viking game in Green Bay. If you have tickets for sale, please call Henry Jordan."

Open Date Helps Football Clubs

NEW YORK (AP) — Does a pro football club gain or lose by an open date in the schedule? The records say it is 2-1 the team will win its next game after a bye.

Dallas sat out the opening week and then bombed New York 52-7. Chicago took a week off and sneaked past Minnesota 13-10. The Vikings came off a bye to ruin Los Angeles 35-7 and Cleveland took advantage of the extra week to upset Dallas 30-21.

San Francisco and Baltimore lost after the bye, making it 4-2 in favor of the idle clubs in National Football League play so far. Pittsburgh, off last Sunday, will put the percentage table to the test Sunday against Dallas.

In the American Football League the score is 6-3 making the overall pro total 10-5 in favor of the team with the bye. Buffalo is coming off a bye this Sunday when it plays the Jets at New York.

Time ran out for the Minnesota Vikings last Sunday with them trailing Baltimore 20-17 and the ball on the Colts' 25. Francis Tarkenton had just completed a pass to Tommy Mason for a three-yard gain with 21 seconds to go and time ran out before he could throw again or get the field goal unit on the field.

"If I had to do it over again I would have thrown out of bounds," said Tarkenton. "I still thought we had time enough after Mason caught the ball but we didn't line up quick enough and there was some confusion."

When the rookie of the year voting starts, the St. Louis Cardinals can put forth a strong candidate in halfback Johnny Roland. The former Missouri back has piled up a total of 841 yards with 327 rushing, 103 receiving, 227 on kickoff runbacks and 184 on punt returns. Rookie Roy Shivers of Utah State hasn't carried the ball on a play from scrimmage but has gained 554 yards, 430 of them on kickoff returns for the Cards.

CHARLIE BROWN IN THIRD TV SPECIAL FOR HALLOWEEN

Halloween brings more tricks than treats to good old Charlie Brown and the rest of the "Peanuts" characters in their new holiday special, "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown," animated cartoon feature to be broadcast in color Thursday, Oct. 27 (8:30-9:00 p.m. EDT and PDT; 7:30-8:00 p.m., CDT) on the CBS Television Network.

Who else would get rocks instead of goodies in his trick-or-treat bag? Who else would be the unwitting model for the neighborhood's jack-o-lantern? Who else would fall for the same old football trick for the umpteenth time? Good grief, nobody but Charlie Brown.

Meanwhile, back at the pumpkin patch, Linus prepares for his annual Great Pumpkin vigil, awaiting the arrival of that legendary figure who flies through the Halloween night bringing toys to good little children everywhere. So far, Linus has never seen the Pumpkin--and neither has anybody else--but his faith survives the ridicule of his "Peanuts" playmates and he persuades Sally to join him in the suspenseful watch.

The rest of the gang are busy planning and making their costumes for the annual Halloween party. Thinly disguised as a World War I ace, Snoopy (the sort-of-beagle) gets so carried away with his costume that he embarks on a colorful fantasy in which he and his Sopwith Camel engage the wicked Red Baron in a history--making dogfight.

"It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" marks the third television feature starring characters from the popular United Feature Syndicate comic strip, "Peanuts," created by artist-writer Charles M. Schulz, who also writes the television scripts. The first in the series, "A Charlie Brown Christmas," broadcast last December, was honored with a Peabody Award and a Television Academy Emmy Award. The second, "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," a humorous salute to baseball and vacation time, was one of the most popular shows of the spring season.

Voices of the "Peanuts" people are performed by Peter Robbins as Charlie Brown, Christopher Shea as Linus, Sally Dryer as Lucy, Kathy Steinberg as Sally, Glenn Mendelson as Schroeder, Chris Doran as Shermie, Anne Altieri as Frieda and Jeff Ornstein as Pigpen.

Vince Guaraldi, Award-winning jazz musician who composed and performed the original score for previous Charlie Brown Specials, will write original music for the Halloween story. John Scott Trotter, 30-year veteran of broadcast music, will arrange the score, which will include everything from special "spook" music to modern interpretations of World War I songs (in the Snoopy sequence.)

Lee Mendelson is executive producer and Bill Melendez is director of animation for the special.

"It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" is a Lee Mendelson-Bill Melendez Production in cooperation with United Feature Syndicate, Inc. It will be sponsored by The Coca Cola Company.

Soldier's Letter Says Viet Nam Does Need Help

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Sitting in the hills near Pleiku, South Viet Nam, Pfc. William J. Cox, 23, of Saginaw wrote his wife of one month:

"I'm not saying it will, but if anything should happen to me, don't ever believe or let someone tell you it was all for nothing. These people really need our help and would be lost without it.

"It is an odd feeling, looking out across this area and watching the land meet the sky, wondering where the expression 'God-forsaken country' came from. This place is too beautiful, too peaceful, too green and rich for God to ever forsake it.

"So if anyone ever tells you we don't belong in Viet Nam, let them read this, because it is written by a guy in Viet Nam who would like to be home. And who is as scared as any other GI, but still believes it's all worth it to help these people keep their country free."

Cox had been in Viet Nam only a week when he wrote. A week later he was reported missing, after a truck he was driving was ambushed.

Last week his wife, Patricia, a WAC at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and his mother, Mrs. Richard A. Flathau of Saginaw, were notified that Cox had been killed in action.

The first ship sailed through the Suez Canal on Jan. 1, 1937.

Jennifer is auditing her seventh and eighth military science courses in the Reserve Officers Training Corps program at the University of Washington. A student who audits a course attends class and does the required work but does not receive credit.

She has written to the State Department requesting a passport for Viet Nam as soon as possible, but has received no response.

"I've been interested in general warfare for as long as I can remember," she says. "People are always pushing girls into the WAC or nursing when they want to help the country, but that doesn't interest me. I really want to do my part."

Phil Boshaw, who has been in a number of classes with Jennifer, says: "They could be a great help in the Army as far as nursing or office work might go, but a woman's place is not on the battlefield."

Miss Johnson, a junior, has taken courses in military tactics, map reading, military history, the use of Army communication equipment, and rifleman-ship.

"No one has any objection to a girl auditing military science classes as long as her interest is a sincere one," said Capt. Orin Phipps, one of her current instructors.

Driver Not Improved By New Safety Laws

NEW YORK AP -- Now that the automotive hearings in Washington have ended with passage of new auto traffic safety bills, how many of us really believe that the inert metal called an automobile is the cause of accidents?

The impression that the vehicle is primarily to blame was, as we know, left in the minds of many people. But the vehicle seldom causes the accident although it frequently worsens the injury.

Even some critics now admit that the new laws are a step forward. The National Safety Council, which wasn't enthusiastic about some of the legislation, concedes the changes might save 10,000 lives a year.

A certain impression remains, however, perhaps by choice. It is safe to blame the car, rightly or wrongly. Most Americans, while loving their own shining pleasure car, despise cars en masse as a frustration.

This emphasis seems to have generated a giant public indignation against autos, but an almost private indifference, as if everyone knew all along that the driver was the real culprit.

As evidence of this we note that for all the official uproar there has been surprisingly little public reaction or expression of fear lately.

In his Labor Day message to drivers shortly after passage of the Traffic Safety Law of 1966, President Johnson emphasized the driver, not the car. "I ask every American to drive responsibly," he said.

Car sales, reacting to the congressional hearings, slowed down. But at the start of the new model season confident buyers boosted their purchases again, and the industry now has its sights on another big year.

Ford stockholders met during the uproar but the subject didn't dominate the meeting, as you would expect. In Washington, the Supreme Court has declined to rule on car makers' accident liability. The insurance companies, which have a natural interest in safety, haven't changed their policies.

The insurance companies, oil companies and others whose fortunes depend on the automobile market have, instead, been asking about the abilities of the driver. Perhaps their interest is selfish. But their questions are real.

What about drugged drivers, they ask? About blind drivers? Drunken drivers?

Millions now drive after taking prescription drugs, cold tablets, barbiturates. Study after study shows alcohol to be involved in accidents, although perhaps too frequently it is given the entire blame.

One of the nation's largest vehicle insurers says that its studies show accidents are 10 per cent the car's fault, 30 per cent the fault of roads, and 60 per cent the fault of drivers.

The many commercial interests who should be concerned with safety seem relatively uncoordinated. In at least one instance the insurance industry has failed in attempts to even set up discussions with the auto industry.

Pools of expertise exist unused. And many drivers remain confident that they couldn't possibly contribute to the billion dollars a month lost through auto accidents.

Demand May Double In 20 Years

ROME (AP) - The demand for food in the world's hungrier countries may increase by more than 100 per cent in the next two decades. There is little prospect that the world's food production can meet such a need.

These were the pessimistic conclusions of the third report the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization has issued within a month on the chances of coping with the world's increasing malnutrition.

The latest report was a summary of the first eight months of work toward what the organization calls "an indicative world plan for the most effective use of scarse agricultural resources in the battle against hunger."

The study is aimed at studying the relations between population growth, income levels and food production as they are likely to exist in 1975 and 1985.

The report to the directing council, in session here, gave what was described as the most optimistic outlook, and a probably more realistic forecast.

Director General B. R. Sen told the council that under the so-called optimistic forecast, with population rising by 2.6 per cent per year and incomes increasing, the demand for food in the developing countries would increase by 45 per cent by 1975. Demand would increase by 110 per cent by 1985.

Approximately 1.5 million persons died during a famine in Bengal, India, as recently as 1943, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

PEA-PICKIN' POINTERS

USDA issues shopper's guide for canned peas.

What can I learn from the label on a can of peas? Do canned peas have nutritive value? Why do canned peas differ in taste? What are Grade A canned peas? Should I always buy the highest grade?

Answers to these questions and more information on canned peas can be found in a publication issued recently by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The "Shopper's Guide for Canned Peas," prepared by food specialists in USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service, presents information often requested by consumers about canned peas.

The leaflet answers for shoppers, questions about sizes and types of peas available, grades, contents of a can, nutritive value, and suggestions for economizing on purchases depending on how the peas will be served.

Single copies of "Shopper's Guide for Canned Peas," PA-728, may be obtained by postcard request from the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250. Please include your zipcode in your return address.

CHARLIE BROWN IN THIRD TV SPECIAL FOR HALLOWEEN

Halloween brings more tricks than treats to good old Charlie Brown and the rest of the "Peanuts" characters in their new holiday special, "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown," animated cartoon feature to be broadcast in color Thursday, Oct. 27 (8:30-9:00 p.m. EDT and PDT; 7:30-8:00 p.m., CDT) on the CBS Television Network.

Who else would get rocks instead of goodies in his trick-or-treat bag? Who else would be the unwitting model for the neighborhood's jack-o-lantern? Who else would fall for the same old football trick for the umpteenth time? Good grief, nobody but Charlie Brown.

Meanwhile, back at the pumpkin patch, Linus prepares for his annual Great Pumpkin vigil, awaiting the arrival of that legendary figure who flies through the Halloween night bringing toys to good little children everywhere. So far, Linus has never seen the Pumpkin--and neither has anybody else--but his faith survives the ridicule of his "Peanuts" playmates and he persuades Sally to join him in the suspenseful watch.

The rest of the gang are busy planning and making their costumes for the annual Halloween party. Thinly disguised as a World War I ace, Snoopy (the sort-of-beagle) gets so carried away with his costume that he embarks on a colorful fantasy in which he and his Sopwith Camel engage the wicked Red Baron in a history--making dogfight.

"It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" marks the third television feature starring characters from the popular United Feature Syndicate comic strip, "Peanuts," created by artist-writer Charles M. Schulz, who also writes the television scripts. The first in the series, "A Charlie Brown Christmas," broadcast last December, was honored with a Peabody Award and a Television Academy Emmy Award. The second, "Charlie Brown's All-Stars," a humorous salute to baseball and vacation time, was one of the most popular shows of the spring season.

Voices of the "Peanuts" people are performed by Peter Robbins as Charlie Brown, Christopher Shea as Linus, Sally Dryer as Lucy, Kathy Steinberg as Sally, Glenn Mendelson as Schroeder, Chris Doran as Shermie, Anne Altieri as Frieda and Jeff Ornstein as Pigpen.

Vince Guaraldi, Award-winning jazz musician who composed and performed the original score for previous Charlie Brown Specials, will write original music for the Halloween story. John Scott Trotter, 30-year veteran of broadcast music, will arrange the score, which will include everything from special "spook" music to modern interpretations of World War I songs (in the Snoopy sequence.)

Lee Mendelson is executive producer and Bill Melendez is director of animation for the special.

"It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" is a Lee Mendelson-Bill Melendez Production in cooperation with United Feature Syndicate, Inc. It will be sponsored by The Coca Cola Company.

Soldier's Letter Says Viet Nam Does Need Help

"I'm not saying it will, but if anything should happen to me, don't ever believe or let someone tell you it was all for nothing. These people really need our help and would be lost without it.

"It is an odd feeling, looking out across this area and watching the land meet the sky, wondering where the expression 'God-forsaken country' came from. This place is too beautiful, too peaceful, too green and rich for God to ever forsake it.

"So if anyone ever tells you we don't belong in Viet Nam, let them read this, because it is written by a guy in Viet Nam who would like to be home. And who is as scared as any other GI, but still believes it's all worth it to help these people keep their country free."

Cox had been in Viet Nam only a week when he wrote. A week later he was reported missing, after a truck he was driving was ambushed.

Last week his wife, Patricia, a WAC at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., and his mother, Mrs. Richard A. Flathau of Saginaw, were notified that Cox had been killed in action.

Adoption of Ideas Ratchford Asks Speedy

COLUMBIA -- The future of Missouri depends on putting new ideas to work earlier, C. B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, told extension workers from throughout the state here this morning during the closing assembly of their annual conference.

"We cannot afford the traditional four to six-year lag in adoption of new ideas," he said. "The future of the state depends on this. We are in competition with other states of the nation, and innovators, those who are first to use new ideas, pick up the blue chips," he added.

There will be a wealth of new ideas as a result of an accelerated knowledge explosion, Ratchford predicted. To keep up with this increased knowledge, it is being recognized more and more that education "must be a life-long process."

While the University will not do all of the continuing education work, it must intensify its efforts. It must give attention to some of the complex and important problems facing the state such as economic development, human relations, organization of local government, transportation, and agricultural adjustment.

Universities have some resources unique in society that are essential in solving complicated problems. Among these are a staff competent in all fields of human knowledge, libraries, laboratories, and computers. "Even our affluent society cannot afford to duplicate these," Ratchford said.

A university extension divison, if it is to help meet the educational needs of society, must be creative, positive, have an experimental attitude, "and we need to keep in a learning mood oursleves,' he told Missouri's extension workers.

The role of a university in extension education must be broader than the confines of the state and nation. It must also be concerned with international programs "for self protection as well as for altruistic reasons," Ratchford said.

Some of the ways a university can contribute through extension type education is to participate in training foreigners in the United States, sending teams of specialists to other lands, train Peace Corps personnel and those who will take part in the Farmer to Farmer program.

To meet these challenges, the University of Missouri Extension Division will seek greater specialization of staff members, both within the University proper and among those in the field, Ratchford said.

To maintain continuing education leadership, extension should be including in its programs "things so new they have not been worked into the regular curriculum," he stated.

"Since new things are often controversial -- and I think we must work with new things -- we should be prepared for some criticism," said Ratchford, adding that "we must not avoid something just because it may be controversial."

The fiscal year which ended June 30 has been a banner period for extension in Missouri, according to Ratchford. He recalled that for the period, 15,311 persons had enrolled in extension courses for credit; 82,783 persons took advantage of educational opportunities through non-credit courses.

Extension meetings drew 1,479,000 people; 870,000 individuals consulted extension workers; and 46,500 volunteer leaders assisted with extension programs.

Ratchford concluded by advising extension workers they must continue to increase their competence through a planned program of professional improvement. "This," he said, "takes time, dedication, and often, agony."

Bullet Removed

SMITH CENTER Kan. (AP) — Donnie Atwill, 10, didn't know it, but for eight weeks he had a 22-caliber bullet lodged in his neck.

"A few days before school started I was standing in front of our house when something hit me in my ear. Blood started running from a cut and it hurt an awful lot," he said recently. A doctor bandaged the wound but the bullet was not noticed.

The bullet was discovered when his mother took him to the doctor again. It was removed.

Awards to Regional Directors

COLUMBIA, Mo. -- Three University of Missouri extension workers were presented the Epsilon Sigma Phi award Thursday morning.

The three are Alvis D. Arnhart, Cape Girardeau county extension director; Mrs. Ella Binney, Daviess county extension district.

The award is in recognition for professional extension work. Selection is by vote of members of Epsilon Sigma Phi, an honorary society of extension workers.

Harrison's extension career began June 1, 1936 with appointment as assistant county agent at large. He was later named assistant county agent in Dunklin county. He became a state extension agent Dec. 1, 1946.

On March 1, 1962, Harrison became director of the Southeast Missouri extension district. He was appointed to his present position Sept. 1, 1965.

Adoption of Ideas Ratchford Asks Speedy

COLUMBIA -- The future of Missouri depends on putting new ideas to work earlier, C. B. Ratchford, University of Missouri vice-president for extension, told extension workers from throughout the state here this morning during the closing assembly of their annual conference.

"We cannot afford the traditional four to six-year lag in adoption of new ideas," he said. "The future of the state depends on this. We are in competition with other states of the nation, and innovators, those who are first to use new ideas, pick up the blue chips," he added.

There will be a wealth of new ideas as a result of an accelerated knowledge explosion, Ratchford predicted. To keep up with this increased knowledge, it is being recognized more and more that education "must be a life-long process."

While the University will not do all of the continuing education work, it must intensify its efforts. It must give attention to some of the complex and important problems facing the state such as economic development, human relations, organization of local government, transportation, and agricultural adjustment.

Universities have some resources unique in society that are essential in solving complicated problems. Among these are a staff competent in all fields of human knowledge, libraries, laboratories, and computers. "Even our affluent society cannot afford to duplicate these," Ratchford said.

A university extension divison, if it is to help meet the educational needs of society, must be creative, positive, have an experimental attitude, "and we need to keep in a learning mood ourselves,' he told Missouri's extension workers.

The role of a university in extension education must be broader than the confines of the state and nation. It must also be concerned with international programs "for self protection as well as for altruistic reasons," Ratchford said.

Some of the ways a university can contribute through extension type education is to participate in training foreigners in the United States, sending teams of specialists to other lands, train Peace Corps personnel and those who will take part in the Farmer to Farmer program.

To meet these challenges, the University of Missouri Extension Division will seek greater specialization of staff members, both within the University proper and among those in the field, Ratchford said.

To maintain continuing education leadership, extension should be including in its programs "things so new they have not been worked into the regular curriculum," he stated.

"Since new things are often controversial -- and I think we must work with new things -- we should be prepared for some criticism," said Ratchford, adding that "we must not avoid something just because it may be controversial."

The fiscal year which ended June 30 has been a banner period for extension in Missouri, according to Ratchford. He recalled that for the period, 15,311 persons had enrolled in extension courses for credit; 82,783 persons took advantage of educational opportunities through non-credit courses.

Extension meetings drew 1,479,000 people; 870,000 individuals consulted extension workers; and 46,500 volunteer leaders assisted with extension programs.

Ratchford concluded by advising extension workers they must continue to increase their competence through a planned program of professional improvement. "This," he said, "takes time, dedication, and often, agony."

AUSTIN, Tex. AP -- After 20 children, Mrs. Albert L. Herrera says "I think this is enough, but if the good Lord gives me more, I will receive them gladly."

Mrs. Herrera, who is 40 and the wife of a produce company truck driver, gave birth Saturday in Austin, Tex., to a boy, Gerard. Her oldest child is 24. All were single births.

"I just thought it would be lovely to have a big family," she said.

Workers Recruited For Florida Fields

Leon O. Garnett, manager of the state employment service office, stated today that recruitment for workers to harvest citrus fruits and vegetables in Florida is in progress.

In past years, the demands of cotton harvest made extensive out - area recruitment before mid - December impracticable. This year, with short cotton production prospects, the demands for cotton hand pickers have been light, creating a surplus of field workers.

Florida growers have indicated prospects of good crops and shortages of workers. Most of the orders offer transportation.

Machine cotton picking is getting underway in Missouri as the weather improves. The apple harvest nears completion with good quality and quantity yield reported.

Corn and soybean harvest are moving at a fast pace in the state as excellent weather conditions prevail over most of Missouri the Missouri state employment service reports in its final farm labor bulletin of the season.

Cotton picking is still slow getting underway in the Sikeston area. The estimated average was two days of work last week. Temporary and full-time qualified farm hands are in demand. Combine and cotton picking machine operators are scarce.

The farm labor information station and rest camp, route two, served 680 migrants last week. All were enroute to Texas. So far this year, the camp has served 12,141 persons.

The cotton harvest was temporarily halted in the Kennett area due to rain two days this week but the weather has cleared and the cotton picking machines are trying to roll again. There is little activity other than cotton picking going on.

In the Cape Girardeau area, progress is being made in all harvest activities. The apple crop is good. Additional workers could be utilized, yet there is not critical shortage of labor. There is no labor available for out - of - area employment.

Showers in the Poplar Bluff area have delayed farming activities. There is no labor shortage and no available labor for referral to other areas. The cotton harvest is estimated to be about 25 per cent completed and to date last year was 75 per cent completed. There are few mechanical pickers in operation due to the heavy foliage on cotton plants.

There is little farm activity this week in the Caruthersville area as it rained the first three days. Most of the cotton is open and ready for harvesting. So far, gins have been able to keep up with the harvest easily. This situation would change rapidly if the weather would remain favorable.

What Most GIs Want Is Something Made by Family

WASHINGTON AP -- All I want for Christmas, says the typical U. S. serviceman overseas, are things made by my family at home.

That, explains the American Red Cross, is a consensus of a survey of its field directors stationed with the troops at home and abroad.

The survey indicates that most servicemen prefer the more personal and meaningful presents to luxury items, which they often can buy more cheaply at post exchanges.

Suggestions on the Red Cross' gift list include sweaters, socks, family photographs, hometown newspapers and school periodicals and recorded messages.

Although the typical serviceman prefers homemade cookies most of all, the Red Cross warned that such perishable goods are not practical gifts for servicemen in tropical areas like Southeast Asia.

Boy Rewarded for Bank Robbery Advice

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Timothy Duncan is only 8 years old, but he has already collected a $5 reward for his efforts to thwart would - be bank robbers.

Timothy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Duncan, recently took note of a $10,000 robbery at the American National Bank on Oct. 19.

The third - grader wrote a letter to the bank owners.

"Sorry about your robbery. I had an idea the other day about how to fool crooks. Why don't you give each teller a drawer full of fake money. Then when the robber asks for money the teller can act scared and give the robber the fake money."

Philip Lichtenstein, bank president, thanked the lad in a letter and said he was sending him a certificate for a $5 savings account as a special reward.

Fraternity Sweetheart Plays Hard to Get

HANOVER, N. H. AP -- Sadie, the slithering sweetheart of Zeta Psi, is still haunting the woodwork at the Dartmouth College fraternity house.

Sadie, a six-foot boa constrictor, disappeared into the walls about two months ago. She was last seen by a carpet worker who glanced up a wall and found himself face-to-face with the snake.

Sadie poked her head through a hole in the wall, then ducked back into the woodrowk. Campus police set up a heater and a cage of mice to attract her but she stayed out.

"We're sure she's still alive," said her owner, Weems Westfeldt, 20, of Denver, Colo., "and she's probably getting ready for the winter."

Mrs. Herrera, who is 40 and the wife of a produce company truck driver, gave birth Saturday in Austin, Tex., to a boy, Gerard. Her oldest child is 24. All were single births.

Workers Recruited For Florida Fields

Leon O. Garnett, manager of the state employment service office, stated today that recruitment for workers to harvest citrus fruits and vegetables in Florida is in progress.

In past years, the demands of cotton harvest made extensive out - area recruitment before mid - December impracticable. This year, with short cotton production prospects, the demands for cotton hand pickers have been light, creating a surplus of field workers.

Florida growers have indicated prospects of good crops and shortages of workers. Most of the orders offer transportation.

Machine cotton picking is getting underway in Missouri as the weather improves. The apple harvest nears completion with good quality and quantity yield reported.

Corn and soybean harvest are moving at a fast pace in the state as excellent weather conditions prevail over most of Missouri the Missouri state employment service reports in its final farm labor bulletin of the season.

Cotton picking is still slow getting underway in the Sikeston area. The estimated average was two days of work last week. Temporary and full-time qualified farm hands are in demand. Combine and cotton picking machine operators are scarce.

The farm labor information station and rest camp, route two, served 680 migrants last week. All were enroute to Texas. So far this year, the camp has served 12,141 persons.

The cotton harvest was temporarily halted in the Kennett area due to rain two days this week but the weather has cleared and the cotton picking machines are trying to roll again. There is little activity other than cotton picking going on.

In the Cape Girardeau area, progress is being made in all harvest activities. The apple crop is good. Additional workers could be utilized, yet there is not critical shortage of labor. There is no labor available for out - of - area employment.

Showers in the Poplar Bluff area have delayed farming activities. There is no labor shortage and no available labor for referral to other areas. The cotton harvest is estimated to be about 25 per cent completed and to date last year was 75 per cent completed. There are few mechanical pickers in operation due to the heavy foliage on cotton plants.

There is little farm activity this week in the Caruthersville area as it rained the first three days. Most of the cotton is open and ready for harvesting. So far, gins have been able to keep up with the harvest easily. This situation would change rapidly if the weather would remain favorable.

What Most GIs Want Is Something Made by Family

WASHINGTON AP -- All I want for Christmas, says the typical U. S. serviceman overseas, are things made by my family at home.

That, explains the American Red Cross, is a consensus of a survey of its field directors stationed with the troops at home and abroad.

The survey indicates that most servicemen prefer the more personal and meaningful presents to luxury items, which they often can buy more cheaply at post exchanges.

Suggestions on the Red Cross' gift list include sweaters, socks, family photographs, hometown newspapers and school periodicals and recorded messages.

Although the typical serviceman prefers homemade cookies most of all, the Red Cross warned that such perishable goods are not practical gifts for servicemen in tropical areas like Southeast Asia.

Boy Rewarded for Bank Robbery Advice

ST. LOUIS, Mo. AP -- Timothy Duncan is only 8 years old, but he has already collected a $5 reward for his efforts to thwart would - be bank robbers.

Timothy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Duncan, recently took note of a $10,000 robbery at the American National Bank on Oct. 19.

The third - grader wrote a letter to the bank owners.

"Sorry about your robbery. I had an idea the other day about how to fool crooks. Why don't you give each teller a drawer full of fake money. Then when the robber asks for money the teller can act scared and give the robber the fake money."

Philip Lichtenstein, bank president, thanked the lad in a letter and said he was sending him a certificate for a $5 savings account as a special reward.

Magna Carta and the Rule of Law

In the fourteenth century particularly, the interpretation of the Charter was decisively widened, and the modern concepts of equality before the law and trial by jury probably have their origin in this period. The term free man, for instance, liber homo, gradually lost the aristocratic connotations it had possessed in 1215, and came to mean any free man, while the phrase per legem terrae was interpreted as meaning by due process of law; the Charter was made to cover trial by jury and procedure by wit: it was imagined to curtail the jurisdiction of the council and of special commissions; and it was supposed to ensure trial according to the procedure of the common law. The Charter had ceased to be merely a baronial charter of liberties, and, if it had not yet been transformed into the Englishman's charter of liberty, the implicit extension of the baronial liberties of the original document to other social groups widened the scope of the charter and was of crucial importance in maintaining its relevance and ensuring its survival. Such interpretations of the Charter might be historical nonsense, but they made very good sense in sustaining and reinforcing private right.

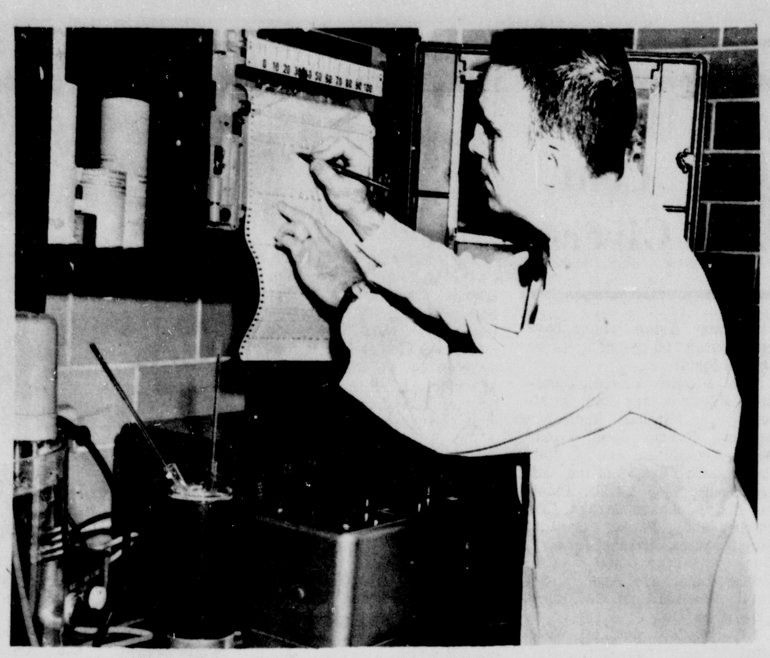

But if the detailed provisions of Magna Carta survived and were reinterpreted in the courts of law, they were of little consequence in the politics of the fourteenth century. What remained after Edward I's reign was the principle it embodied, that the king is below the law. In the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, the charter was confirmed forty-four times, and these repeated confirmations were really affirmations of this principle. Furthermore, repeated confirmation gave the impression that the charter was no ordinary statute, but a document of special permanence and significance; while the solemn ritual of excommunication pronounced against violators of the charter invested it with a special sanctity possessed by no other document.

The idea of the rule of law was firmly rooted in the writings of medieval jurists, above all in Bracton. Bracton laid down that the king is under God and the law, and that there is no king where the will and not the law have dominion. Bracton and Magna Carta were quoted together time and again in sermons on the rule of law in the later middle ages, and in the fifteenth century, the same principle was exalted by Sir John Fortescue. The common lawyers of the seventeeth century were educated on Bracton and Fortescue - Coke said that Fortescue's work ought to be "written in letters of gold" --and the principle of the rule of law and the document which above all embodied it thus remained alive, to be reinterpreted in the seventeenth century in a political struggle which was crucial to the making of the modern constitution.

Medical Research Recognized

COLUMBIA -- Expanding research efforts will be among the many activities of the University of Missouri Medical Center to be recognized at its tenth anniversary celebration in Columbia, Nov. 6-11.

These studies, conducted by faculty members and assisted in many instances by students, are a source of new medical knowledge and a constant stimulus to medical education, according to Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, Dean of the University's School of Medicine and Director of the Medical Center.

The research activities of the Center have been growing at a rapid rate, Dean Wilson said, largely because of two factors: a steady increase in the number of faculty members at the Center and a growing national interest in providing more support for medical research.

As a result of this national effort, the amount of new medical information available to physicians has increased enormously, he said.

As evidence of research growth at the University Medical Center, Dean Wilson noted that in the fourth year of the Center's operation, total research support amounted to only $281,263. In 1965-66, however, research support totalled $2,413,000, and double that amount is expected for the current year.

Research funds at the Medical Center are provided by State and federal agencies, private foundations and philanthropic organizations, and by individuals.

Research studies call for skilled personnel and intricate equipment and require extended periods of time -- thus they are becoming increasingly expensive, Dean Wilson reported.

"New findings come slowly," he said, "after careful study and observation, and many checks and re-checks. Infinite patience is required, as the smallest clue may lead to a better understanding of the causes and nature of a disease."

"Blind alleys are frequently encountered, and new approaches must be taken. As new bits of knowledge become available, physicians are better equipped to help prevent and combat disease."

Much research at the Center is conducted through grants awarded to support its educational and training programs. These funds provide for some staff salaries and stipends for graduate and undergraduate students in fields where there is a particular need for persons with specialized training, Dean Wilson said.

Among studies currently supported by such grants are programs in public health nursing, pathology, dermatology, endocrinology and diabetes mellitus, preventive medicine, biochemistry, mental health and psychiatry, rehabilitation medicine and medical cardiology.

COLUMBIA -- Expanding research efforts will be among the many activities of the University of Missouri Medical Center to be recognized at its tenth anniversary celebration in Columbia, Nov. 6-11.

These studies, conducted by faculty members and assisted in many instances by students, are a source of new medical knowledge and a constant stimulus to medical education, according to Dr. Vernon E. Wilson, Dean of the University's School of Medicine and Director of the Medical Center.

The research activities of the Center have been growing at a rapid rate, Dean Wilson said, largely because of two factors: a steady increase in the number of faculty members at the Center and a growing national interest in providing more support for medical research.

As a result of this national effort, the amount of new medical information available to physicians has increased enormously, he said.

As evidence of research growth at the University Medical Center, Dean Wilson noted that in the fourth year of the Center's operation, total research support amounted to only $281,263. In 1965-66, however, research support totalled $2,413,000, and double that amount is expected for the current year.

Research funds at the Medical Center are provided by State and federal agencies, private foundations and philanthropic organizations, and by individuals.

Research studies call for skilled personnel and intricate equipment and require extended periods of time -- thus they are becoming increasingly expensive, Dean Wilson reported.

"New findings come slowly," he said, "after careful study and observation, and many checks and re-checks. Infinite patience is required, as the smallest clue may lead to a better understanding of the causes and nature of a disease."

"Blind alleys are frequently encountered, and new approaches must be taken. As new bits of knowledge become available, physicians are better equipped to help prevent and combat disease."

Much research at the Center is conducted through grants awarded to support its educational and training programs. These funds provide for some staff salaries and stipends for graduate and undergraduate students in fields where there is a particular need for persons with specialized training, Dean Wilson said.

Among studies currently supported by such grants are programs in public health nursing, pathology, dermatology, endocrinology and diabetes mellitus, preventive medicine, biochemistry, mental health and psychiatry, rehabilitation medicine and medical cardiology.

He was a chaplain with the rank of major in the Army Air Force during World War II, and won four battle stars and the Bronze Star for meritorious service in the European theater. Until coming to Springfield, Mo., in 1949, most of his work has been with Baptist churches in Pennsylvania and New York. He received his doctor of divinity degree in 1943 from Lincoln University, Pa., and has served as pastor in Sharon, Beaver Falls, and Coatesville, Pa.; and Richmond Hill, Long Island, N.Y. He is a member of the general council of the American Baptist convention, and of the editorial committee of the Crusader, national Baptist magazine, and serves as a director of numerous Missouri organizations.

FREEDOM IS not a heritage. It is earned. It is bought with a price. Its cost is high. Freedom dies with every generation. If its ideals are not kept alive, if it is not taught and practiced by every new generation -- then the forces of totalitarianism take over. This is true in all organizations be they government, religious, society or labor. The fight for freedom must take place in every generation. There is no room for complacency where freedom is concerned.

Because the people of our nation have been complacent the forces of totalitarianism are taking over in many areas of our life. We are on guard against these forces which come from without -- from enemy nations, for example -- but we are asleep to the encroachment on our liberties of these forces from within.

Perhaps the area of our national life where encroachment on our freedom of choice has been greatest is in the labor movement. I want it understood without question that I believe in labor's right to organize, to bargain collectively, to strike. I believe in this because I believe in freedom.

But I also believe that a man has a right not to strike if he prefers to work, not join a union if he chooses, or does not agree with the leadership. I believe in this because I believe in freedom. Compelling a man to join any organization -- be it a political party, a religious group, a social club, or a labor union -- is denying him his freedom.

Freedom depends upon choice and where choice is denied, freedom is denied as well. There is no more justification for compulsory unionism than there is justification for compulsory church membership. I would fight for a man's right to join the church of his choice, but I would fight equally as hard for a man's right to refuse to join. To compel any man to make contributions of money for the spreading of a philosophy which he disbelieves is tyranny.

To deny freedom of choice is to deny freedom to the minority. In order to deny freedom to the minority in any organization there must be compulsion. If labor unions persist in fighting for the union shop, in compulsory unionism, then labor unions must apply force to keep the minority group -- the men who would dissent, the men who disagree -- in line.

Whether force is applied by ignorant goons or thugs on the body of the dissenter, or by more sophisticated men against the mind and spirit of the dissenter by instilling fear -- fear of loss of job, fear of social status, fear of harm being inflicted on his family -- it is force nevertheless. Force will degenerate into violence and violence degenerates into hate. Hate is anti-social; it is the world's great discord.

Force, as described above, is not only an enemy of freedom; it not only stifles the voice of the minority, but it is morally wrong. That is why people of all religions should be against it. It is an enemy of the purpose of true unionism, it is an enemy of the nation. It is an enemy of the free practice of religion.

For the principles listed above, I am in favor of right to work laws.

"The principle of freedom versus coercion is the nub of a right to work law. It poses individual freedom against the new lexicon of 'social freedom' with its inevitable sacrifice of rights and always under force or duress. It is one thing to say unions are needed in an industrial society; another to say a man must be forced to join one and be forced to pay into it whether he likes it or not."

Dr. James O. Baird, President., Oklahoma Christian College, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Cairo Bridge Hearing Set for Nov. 29

CAIRO -- A public hearing will be held by the St. Louis district engineer, corps of engineers, in the national guard armory at 1 p.m. Nov. 29 on a new Mississippi river bridge.

The hearing is on application for army approval of plans of the Missouri state highway commission and the Illinois department of public works and buildings, division of highways, for a bridge Northwest of Cairo.

The proposed bridge site is located downstream from Boston bar. Traffic for FAI route 57 will be carried by the bridge between Alexander county, Ill., and Mississippi county, Mo.

Col. Edwin R. Decker, St. Louis district engineer, especially invited navigation interests and officials of state, county, city and local associations, who may be affected by construction of the proposed bridge.

Oral statements will be heard but he urged that for accuracy of records all important facts and arguments be submitted in writing.

The plans call for a horizontal clearance of 650 feet through the main channel span and 450 feet through an adjacent auxiliary span. A minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above water elevation, exceeded two per cent of the time, will be provided through the main channel span.

Cairo Bridge Hearing Set for Nov. 29

CAIRO -- A public hearing will be held by the St. Louis district engineer, corps of engineers, in the national guard armory at 1 p.m. Nov. 29 on a new Mississippi river bridge.

The hearing is on application for army approval of plans of the Missouri state highway commission and the Illinois department of public works and buildings, division of highways, for a bridge Northwest of Cairo.

The proposed bridge site is located downstream from Boston bar. Traffic for FAI route 57 will be carried by the bridge between Alexander county, Ill., and Mississippi county, Mo.

Col. Edwin R. Decker, St. Louis district engineer, especially invited navigation interests and officials of state, county, city and local associations, who may be affected by construction of the proposed bridge.

Oral statements will be heard but he urged that for accuracy of records all important facts and arguments be submitted in writing.

The plans call for a horizontal clearance of 650 feet through the main channel span and 450 feet through an adjacent auxiliary span. A minimum vertical clearance of 55 feet above water elevation, exceeded two per cent of the time, will be provided through the main channel span.

Super Salesman Back at Work After 2-Year Exile

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Matthew Culligan, the super salesman who was the target of a mutiny two years ago while head of Curtis Publishing Co., has returned to executive life again—a bit more philosophical now but just as zealous.

Culligan, 48, retired from executive ranks for two years after the Curtis debacle, his ego bruised and his record of successes broken. But in his second day as president of Mutual Broadcasting System, he commented:

"I'm going to work very, very hard for the next two or three years. It's going to be very rough."

He wasn't complaining. He said it with his old passion for work and results.

Culligan became an almost legendary salesman. At Curtis he averaged 3,300 miles of travel a week, worked 14 to 15 hours a day and, some said, was making headway in pulling the big publishing company out of the red. He could sell. Everyone agreed.

Except for military service, which cost him his left eye, Culligan's adult life has been spent in advertising and sales. He began as a salesman and no matter what executive job he filled he still sold, too. He has been a spieler, space salesman, advertising director, television salesman.

As executive vice president of the National Broadcasting Co.'s radio network his salesmanship helped erase losses. After three years he reportedly put the network in the black. And then he became an ad executive.

"I try to think for the buyers," he says. "I try to make it easy for an intelligent person to buy. And I'm a very good research man so I haven't had to pound on a desk in 25 years."

Executive and employe discontent against his methods led to an open revolt at Curtis, publisher of the Saturday Evening Post and other magazines. Culligan resigned.

For the next two years little was heard of this man who once was the center of action, excitement, news, developments of one kind or another. He retreated from sales and wrote a history of the Curtis organization.

Culligan announced that his first job at Mutual will be to build the business, and he's planning an itinerary that will demand the usual killing, cross-country itinerary in search of ads.

"I've always made a practice of delivering 25 per cent of the business myself and I intend to do it here," he said.

A young Chilean, recently arrived in this country, was attending a party with her husband, who was considerably more fluent in our language than she. Her only encounter with English had been in the American-made movies she saw in Chile, where the Spanish subtitles appeared at the bottom of the screen. Later, her husband asked if she had understood any of the conversation that evening. "Yes, some of it," she replied. "But every time someone said something in English, I always looked at his feet for the translation"

To horse racing fans the Kentucky Derby Museum at Churchill Downs is a mecca of track and champion lore since 1875. On the nearby University of Louisville's campus is the J. B. Speed Art Museum, noted for its medieval displays.

Then there are free tours of bourbon distilleries, fragrant-smelling cigarette factories, and the world's largest baseball bat factory. Of historical interest is Farmington, a red brick mansion designed by Thomas Jefferson; Locust Grove, last home of Gen. George Rogers Clark, founder of Louisville; and the Kentucky Railroad Museum with its steam-age relics.

Driving south on U.S. 31W, interesting stopping points are at Fort Knox, where Uncle Sam's gold hoard rests safely beneath a white granite building surrounded by an allegedly lethal metal fence; the fascinating Patton Museum at Fort Knox, which houses the trophies and field equipment of World War II's colorful hero; and Mammoth Cave National Park, where you can take guided tours of the weird underground caverns.

The Magic Circle route north wends through Lincoln Heritage Trail country. Near Hodgenville is the Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site, where a hilltop temple enshrines the one-room log cabin where Lincoln was born.

At Bardstown is Federal Hill, a gracious red brick mansion where Presidents Monroe, Buchanan and Polk, General Lafayette, and countless pioneer-era notables were entertained. Songwriter Stephen Foster stopped off for a visit in 1852; there was to be a ball in his honor, and Foster reciprocated by writing "My Old Kentucky Home" for the event.

Medical Bulletin Favors Broader Abortion Laws

ST. LOUIS (AP) -An editorial in the St. Louis County Medical Society Bulletin proposes that the state legislature allow doctors to determine if patients should receive therapeutic abortions.

A spokesman for the medical society said Wednesday that the editorial was the opinion of the Bulletin's editorial staff and not the official position of the St. Louis County Medical Society.

Present Missouri law permits therapeutic abortions only if the mother is in danger of death. A therapeutic abortion is the forced ending of a pregnancy in its early stages, generally under 20 weeks, if the abortion thought to be necessary either for the phsycial or psychological health of the mother.

Copies of the editorial will be distributed to state legislators after the Nov. 8 elections, a spokesman for the Bulletin said.

The editorial said the state still lives "under many antiquated laws written by nonmedical zealots who have confused medical necessity with their own interpretations of the moral values of their day."

Homecoming At Cape State

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Southeast Missouri State College will welcome alumni this weekend in homecoming festivities Friday and Saturday.

Highlight will be a concert by the New Christy Minstrels at 8 p.m. Friday in Houck Field House. The 1966 Homecoming Queen, elected last week by a vote of the student body, will be crowned at 9 p.m.

The annual homecoming parade will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, route from Houck Field House along Broadway to the downtown area.

The homecoming football game will be played at Houck field at 2 p.m., pitting the Southeast Missouri State Indians against the University of Missouri at Rolla.

Special events for alumni include the alumni luncheon and business meeting at 11:30 a.m. Saturday in Memorial Hall; a mixer at the Town House motel executive suite; receptions and open houses by campus organizations.

Honored classes at Homecoming will be those of 1916, 1926 and 1941.

The date of the invention of cement is not definitely known, but ancient Roman buildings and roads were built with a cement manufactured of volcanic ash and lime secured from burned marble.

To horse racing fans the Kentucky Derby Museum at Churchill Downs is a mecca of track and champion lore since 1875. On the nearby University of Louisville's campus is the J. B. Speed Art Museum, noted for its medieval displays.

Then there are free tours of bourbon distilleries, fragrant-smelling cigarette factories, and the world's largest baseball bat factory. Of historical interest is Farmington, a red brick mansion designed by Thomas Jefferson; Locust Grove, last home of Gen. George Rogers Clark, founder of Louisville; and the Kentucky Railroad Museum with its steam-age relics.

Driving south on U.S. 31W, interesting stopping points are at Fort Knox, where Uncle Sam's gold hoard rests safely beneath a white granite building surrounded by an allegedly lethal metal fence; the fascinating Patton Museum at Fort Knox, which houses the trophies and field equipment of World War II's colorful hero; and Mammoth Cave National Park, where you can take guided tours of the weird underground caverns.

The Magic Circle route north wends through Lincoln Heritage Trail country. Near Hodgenville is the Abraham Lincoln Birthplace National Historic Site, where a hilltop temple enshrines the one-room log cabin where Lincoln was born.

At Bardstown is Federal Hill, a gracious red brick mansion where Presidents Monroe, Buchanan and Polk, General Lafayette, and countless pioneer-era notables were entertained. Songwriter Stephen Foster stopped off for a visit in 1852; there was to be a ball in his honor, and Foster reciprocated by writing "My Old Kentucky Home" for the event.

Medical Bulletin Favors Broader Abortion Laws

ST. LOUIS (AP) -An editorial in the St. Louis County Medical Society Bulletin proposes that the state legislature allow doctors to determine if patients should receive therapeutic abortions.

A spokesman for the medical society said Wednesday that the editorial was the opinion of the Bulletin's editorial staff and not the official position of the St. Louis County Medical Society.

Present Missouri law permits therapeutic abortions only if the mother is in danger of death. A therapeutic abortion is the forced ending of a pregnancy in its early stages, generally under 20 weeks, if the abortion thought to be necessary either for the phsycial or psychological health of the mother.

Copies of the editorial will be distributed to state legislators after the Nov. 8 elections, a spokesman for the Bulletin said.

The editorial said the state still lives "under many antiquated laws written by nonmedical zealots who have confused medical necessity with their own interpretations of the moral values of their day."

Homecoming At Cape State

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Southeast Missouri State College will welcome alumni this weekend in homecoming festivities Friday and Saturday.

Highlight will be a concert by the New Christy Minstrels at 8 p.m. Friday in Houck Field House. The 1966 Homecoming Queen, elected last week by a vote of the student body, will be crowned at 9 p.m.

The annual homecoming parade will begin at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, route from Houck Field House along Broadway to the downtown area.

The homecoming football game will be played at Houck field at 2 p.m., pitting the Southeast Missouri State Indians against the University of Missouri at Rolla.

Special events for alumni include the alumni luncheon and business meeting at 11:30 a.m. Saturday in Memorial Hall; a mixer at the Town House motel executive suite; receptions and open houses by campus organizations.

Music for the homecoming dance from 8 p.m. to 12 p.m. in the arena building, will be provided by "Booker T and the MG's."

Honored classes at Homecoming will be those of 1916, 1926 and 1941.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

A recent broadcast by Paul Harvey, "It's time to get angry," is appearing as a guest editorial in Southern papers. Many Sikestonians heard Paul Harvey when he spoke here and like what he has to say. Harvey is well informed and does not pull his punches. For those who missed this particular broadcast this is what Harvey said. It is timely and bears repeating:

"I suppose there is a time to be calm-and I suppose Paul Harvey has mellowed with the years. But there is a time to get angry.

I remember a time when even Christ, His patience exhausted, found it necessary to storm into the temple with a short length of rope in one hand and starting smashing up the furniture.

I am saddened when anybody walking down any road in Mississippi is shot down from ambush but I am on the edge of anger when Mississippi is castigated nationwide for the misconduct of a Memphis, Tenn. man and when national magazines and TV lure their editorial epithets at Mississippi for one shooting and look the other way from the present average of two murders a day in Chicago!

I am on the edge of anger when one man wounded in Mississippi crowds from the front pages and from the nations conscience 2,000 dead Americans in Viet Nam!

I'm on the edge of anger when kookie college kids can demonstrate for peace at any price, but they can't find time to shave and take a bath!-and when my government protects those who break the law and intimidates those who dare try to enforce it!

I'm on the edge of anger when a college professor can limelight himself by proclaiming "God Is Dead" while a free press ignores the greatest demonstration of all when 86,000,000 Americans march every week-to church! And when the government tells me I must sacrifice the fruits of my labor to support those who do no labor!

I am on the edge of anger when the tax man says I get an allowance of only $600 a year to rear my legitimate son, yet the welfare people would pay me $900 a year if he were an illigitimate one.

I am on the edge of anger realizing that every baby born into this one time land of free is already $1,900 in debt.

I am on the edge of anger when we make a big domestic to-do about saving electricity and groceries at the White House while we dump millions into thankless foreign parts; while we regulate and regiment and over tax and tyranize our own countrymen while defending freedom for foreigners and I get real close to the edge of anger when I hear our hypocritical breast beating over the urgent rights of the minority in our own country while we ignore the Amish and the Indians and when we Judaists kiss our sons goodbye because we own the weapons adequate to end any war yet lack the guts to use them!

When we have everything going for us to create a Golden Age of arts, culture, sciences, yet let unfriendly friends and friendly enemies, syphon away this glorious opportunity.

I am on the edge of anger and maybe between now and November I may move over the edge! If this is the best either party has to offer it is perpetuation of this sad circus-this pusillanimous game of crisis after crisis after crisis after crisis will go on."

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: You said in a column not long ago that some children will do naughty things so they will be noticed. I wish you would explain this to me because I have three children and one of them is driving me nutty.

The middle boy is 10 years old. He is so slow about everything that I lose all patience with him. The teachers say he is smart in his studies and his grades are good, but he is mean to other kids during recess--pushes them down and gets into fights all the time.

I have tried spanking, punishment, no TV, no dessert. Nothing helps. Everyone I talk to says he wants attention. They say I should give him a little extra loving but I feel that a mother should treat all her children alike. Am I wrong or right?--TROUBLED

Dear Troubled: Each child should be treated as an individual. I'll bet this child needs more loving and I hope you'll see that he gets it.

The middle child is in a difficult spot. He must compete with the older one who gets special privileges, and the younger one who is favored because he's the baby. The middle child is indeed "in the middle"--in more ways than one.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 13. We are considered pretty well off, financially.

Several months ago my cousin gave me a bike. It originally belonged to her mother. The bike is at least 30 years old.

The group I go with all have bikes--the latest models. When I showed up with this antique they broke up. The front tire goes kerblunk kerblunk and the rear tire makes a wheezing sound like a person with asthma. The kickstand doesn't hold and nobody can fix it because nobody has ever seen one like it before.

When I aked Mom for a new bike she said this one is good enough. I wish you'd tell her how embarrassing it is for a girl to have to ride a piece of junk when everybody else has nice new bikes.-- VERY ASHAMED

Dear Very: Ask your mom how you can earn the money to pay for half a bike. If you earn half, I think your mom should come up with the other half. And this is the solution I am recommending.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a man 20 who has been keeping steady company with a girl 22.

I want to settle down and I have been thinking about asking Margaret to be my wife.

Last night we had a long talk. asked Margaret some questions about her life and I was very disappointed with the way she has conducted herself these past two years.

Margaret had an affair with a 37-year-old man who is married and the father of three children. I was so stunned I couldn't speak.

I come from a strict family and my religion means a great deal to me. I don't know if I could ever get this other man out of my mind. I also don't know if I could trust her. She had me completely fooled. Please answer. I'm going to do as you say.--MIKE

Dear Mike: Don't marry the girl. You'd hold her past against her for the rest of her days.

It takes a mature, compassionate, generous person to forgive a transgression of this kind and you don't measure up. So do yourself and Margaret a favor and take a hike, Mike.

Is a heavy drinker an alcoholic? How can you tell? Is there a cure for alcoholism? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Alcoholism-Hope and Help." Enclose with your request, 35¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAD LINE NEARS FOR REGULAR NROTC QUALIFYING EXAM

The deadline date for making application for the Regular NROTC qualifying examination is fast approaching. Applications must be received by the Educational Testing Service on or before 18 November 1966. Applicants will participate in the nationwide competitive examination on 10 December 1966, the only date on which the examination will be given, as the first step toward a college education and a regular commission in the naval service.

All tuition, fees, and books are furnished by the Navy, and the student received a subsistence allowance of $50.00 per month for not more than four years. During each summer between his college years, a midshipman participates in interesting training cruises.

High School seniors and graduates who will be entering college in September 1967 may apply for the Navy College Aptitude Test. Those who make a qualifying score on the Navy College Aptitude Test (NCAT) will be given a medical examination and will complete their applications in January and February 1967.

Applications for the NCAT are available at local high schools and Navy Recruiting Stations, or from the Chief of Naval Personnel (Pers-B6261), Department of the Navy, Washington, D. C. 20370.

Investment Firm Head Asks Faith

ST. LOUIS - Shelton W. Morley, president of the St. Louis investment firm of Fusz-Schmelzle and Co., told members of the firm, Wednesday to have faith in American industry.

Speaking to 60 representatives of the company on the eve of its 36th anniversary, he said:

"In the investment business, American industry is the commodity we sell. On this our 36th anniversary, we would like to reaffirm our faith in the ingenuity and integrity of American industry and the ability and productivity of American labor. History justifies that faith.

"During the last 36 years the drive of American industry has pulled us out of a depression, won a world war, rebuilt war - torn nations and consistently provided Americans with the highest standard of living the world has ever seen.

"Those who would listen to the prophets of gloom and doom, lose faith and sell America short just because one narrow - based stock market average has lost 25 per cent, are short of memory and weak of courage.

"The deacons of disaster are a dime a dozen. They are certain newsmen who glory in publicizing America's economic plight and seldom write a line about America's accommarket analysts who are making the mistakes of hundreds before them. American industry always has, and always will make idiots of the lot.

"We owe it to our country, to ourselves and to those we serve, to preserve this faith in American industry and to reply on common sense instead of hysteria and emotionalism. Let's quit trying to kill the golden goose and believe what history has already proven to us. Or maybe those of the ilk of Khrushchev will bury us after all."

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 13. We are considered pretty well off, financially.

Several months ago my cousin gave me a bike. It originally belonged to her mother. The bike is at least 30 years old.

The group I go with all have bikes--the latest models. When I showed up with this antique they broke up. The front tire goes kerblunk kerblunk and the rear tire makes a wheezing sound like a person with asthma. The kickstand doesn't hold and nobody can fix it because nobody has ever seen one like it before.

When I aked Mom for a new bike she said this one is good enough. I wish you'd tell her how embarrassing it is for a girl to have to ride a piece of junk when everybody else has nice new bikes.-- VERY ASHAMED

Dear Very: Ask your mom how you can earn the money to pay for half a bike. If you earn half, I think your mom should come up with the other half. And this is the solution I am recommending.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a man 20 who has been keeping steady company with a girl 22.

I want to settle down and I have been thinking about asking Margaret to be my wife.

Last night we had a long talk. asked Margaret some questions about her life and I was very disappointed with the way she has conducted herself these past two years.

Margaret had an affair with a 37-year-old man who is married and the father of three children. I was so stunned I couldn't speak.

I come from a strict family and my religion means a great deal to me. I don't know if I could ever get this other man out of my mind. I also don't know if I could trust her. She had me completely fooled. Please answer. I'm going to do as you say.--MIKE

It takes a mature, compassionate, generous person to forgive a transgression of this kind and you don't measure up. So do yourself and Margaret a favor and take a hike, Mike.

Is a heavy drinker an alcoholic? How can you tell? Is there a cure for alcoholism? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Alcoholism-Hope and Help." Enclose with your request, 35¢ in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAD LINE NEARS FOR REGULAR NROTC QUALIFYING EXAM

The deadline date for making application for the Regular NROTC qualifying examination is fast approaching. Applications must be received by the Educational Testing Service on or before 18 November 1966. Applicants will participate in the nationwide competitive examination on 10 December 1966, the only date on which the examination will be given, as the first step toward a college education and a regular commission in the naval service.

All tuition, fees, and books are furnished by the Navy, and the student received a subsistence allowance of $50.00 per month for not more than four years. During each summer between his college years, a midshipman participates in interesting training cruises.

Investment Firm Head Asks Faith

ST. LOUIS -- Shelton W. Morley, president of the St. Louis investment firm of Fusz-Schmelzle and Co., told members of the firm, Wednesday to have faith in American industry.

Speaking to 60 representatives of the company on the eve of its 36th anniversary, he said:

"In the investment business, American industry is the commodity we sell. On this our 36th anniversary, we would like to reaffirm our faith in the ingenuity and integrity of American industry and the ability and productivity of American labor. History justifies that faith.

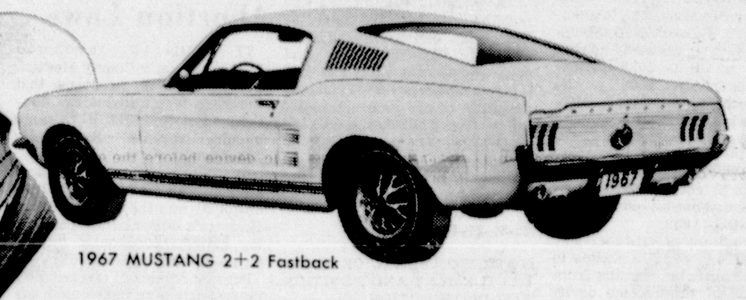

"During the last 36 years the drive of American industry has pulled us out of a depression, won a world war, rebuilt war - torn nations and consistently provided Americans with the highest standard of living the world has ever seen.

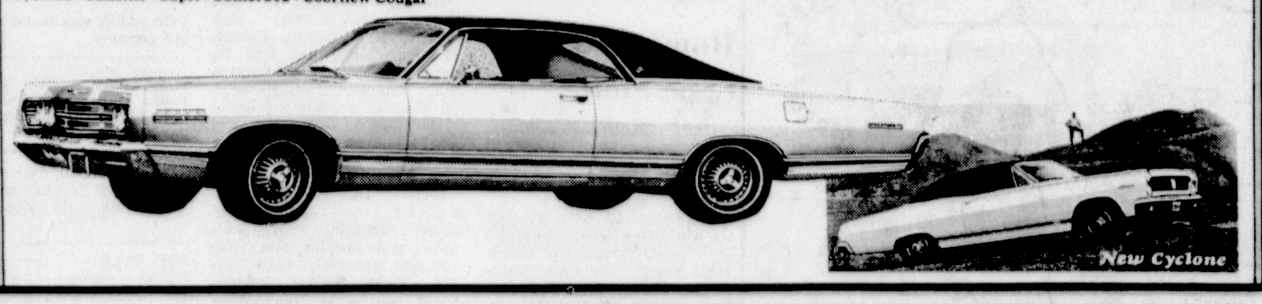

"Those who would listen to the prophets of gloom and doom, lose faith and sell America short just because one narrow - based stock market average has lost 25 per cent, are short of memory and weak of courage.

"The deacons of disaster are a dime a dozen. They are certain newsmen who glory in publicizing America's economic plight and seldom write a line about America's accommarket analysts who are making the mistakes of hundreds before them. American industry always has, and always will make idiots of the lot.

"We owe it to our country, to ourselves and to those we serve, to preserve this faith in American industry and to reply on common sense instead of hysteria and emotionalism. Let's quit trying to kill the golden goose and believe what history has already proven to us. Or maybe those of the ilk of Khrushchev will bury us after all."

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Oct. 27, the 300th day of 1966. There are 65 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, what was termed the greatest Navy Day celebration in history took place. President Harry S. Truman reviewed 47 warships in the Hudson River while a fleet of 1,200 Navy planes flew overhead.

On this date:

In 1858, Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th President of the United States, was born.

In 1904, the first subway in the United States opened in New York.

In 1944, Adm. Chester Nimitz said the Japanese fleet suffered so heavily in the Philippines Sea battle it would be unable to challenge American naval units again.

Ten years ago... The Soviet Union reiterated its position on the question of German reunification in notes to the United States, Britain and France, saying the only hope for reunification lay in direct negotiations between West Germany and the Soviet-sponsored East German regime.

Five years ago... The U.N. General Assembly adopted by an overwhelming vote a resolution appealing to the Soviet Union to refrain from carrying out its plans to explode in the atmosphere a 50-megaton atomic device before the end of the month.

One year ago... South Vietnamese rangers with support from U.S. warplanes repulsed a Communist Viet Cong assault on a South Vietnamese outpost only 20 miles from Saigon.

Holidays Dropped

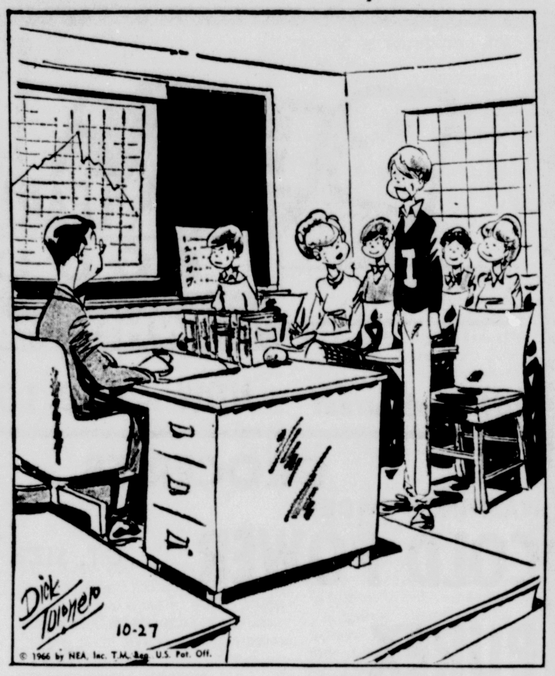

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The Roman Catholic Diocese of Allentown says parochial school children within its jurisdiction will no longer be excused from classes on holy days — All Saints Day and the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

The change was made because some parochial school children now are being transported in public school buses, the diocese said. The parochial schools will observe only those holidays listed on public school calendars.

I'm sure there's no life on Mars-it's not listed on my wife's phone bills.

JOHNSON

build peaceful societies in Asia.

He said the committment of the seven nations at Manila to peace and progress "is not mere rhetoric to be stored in the dust bins of diplomatic history."

The goals of the allies—to be free from aggression, to raise living standards, to build a region of security and progress and to seek peaceful reconciliation—are why the U.S. soldiers are in Viet Nam, Johnson said.

"And when I looked into their faces at Camh Ran Bay, I knew that what we had done in Manila was for real," he said.

The President stated that the allied leaders saw much progress so far in both military and nation-building efforts in South Viet Nam.

And in extending their peace bid to North Viet Nam, the President declared that none of the allies had insisted on "the unconditional surrender of the forces opposing us or on the terms which those forces could reasonably find dishonorable."

Johnson spoke particularly of the allies' declaration of willingness to pull their troops out of South Viet Nam within six months-- "and perhaps even sooner" after peace conditions are met.

"This was, I think, an important step forward. Our intentions are in writing now for all the world to see," he said.

"Those who have doubted them can continue to doubt only to hide their unwillingness to seek peace."

Johnson concluded that "having followed every hint and made every gesture" toward peace at the Manila conference, "the ball is in the other court" now and it is up to Hanoi to make a concilliatory move.

On his visit to what he termed "the front line of a contest as far-reaching and as vital as any we have ever waged," the President reported that the men at Cam Ranh Bay and their "buddies throughout Viet Nam" are there "to keep aggression from succeeding."

"They are there to stop one nation from taking over another nation by force. They are there to help people who do not want to have an ideology pushed down their throats and imposed upon them," he said.

"They are there because somewhere, and at some place, the free nations of the world must say again to the militant disciples to Asian communism this far and no further. The time is now and the place is Viet Nam."

On a more personal note, Johnson said he found "The struggle in Viet Nam becomes very real when you stand among men who have tasted its agony and experienced its horror."

"No commander in chief," he said, "could meet face to face with these soldiers without asking himself:

'What is it they are doing here? What does it mean—the sacrifice and valor of the very young and the very best?'

The President answered this question by saying the American fighting men are in battle today, as in the past, to "resist aggression."

"I thank God for the courage of these men," he said. "I thank God for the unity of the free nations which are standing up to terror.

"And I pray to God that our adversary may soon decide that he can not succeed in what he is attempting, and that he then will renounce the use of force in Viet Nam."

Vast Expansion Program

BOSTON AP - The Tufts-New England Medical Center has announced plans for a $72.5-million construction and expansion program that will take 15 years to complete.

CONRAN

elsewhere for jobs for which they were trained. This causes a drain on the available skilled labor in a region that has difficulty in bringing in new industry.

Home economics teachers have been instructing the poor how to prepare appetizing meals with commodity surplus foods, he continued. Delicious and nourishing meals can be prepared from these commodity foodstuffs if the poor people are taught how to prepare them, he explained.

The Head Start program, which prepares deprived children for the classroom learning and social experiences, is another valuable phase of the poverty program, he said.

However, Head Start takes children at ages 5 and 6, a level where many of their behavioral habits and attitudes have already been established and will continue the rest of their lives, he said.

A program of instruction should be set up for children 3 and 4 years old, he said. Such a project would benefit poverty children more because it would deal with youngsters before those behavioral and attitude traits have been patterned.

Once the children understand the correct behavior, they will want to live better lives and improve themselves, Conran remarked.

The aid to dependent children welfare program only produces more dependent children, he added. Persons on ADC become lazy because they are satisfied with receiving the ADC checks and will not try to improve themselves or work for a wage.

He also noted a need for different classifications of poverty children. Levels of ability and intelligence vary widely among human beings. No two humans are created equal, he noted, and some are born with more capcity to learn than others.

Provisions should be made to train the retarded child to his full capacities rather than put him on a level of instruction with children who have more capacity for learning, he explained.

Conran noted the need for immediate employment in the six counties. He submitted for approval to the DAEOC board plans for employment of all who need jobs in New Madrid county, but the plan was rejected by the board.

Such programs included the elimination of Johnson grass from the drainage ditches in the county. These projects could employ those who need jobs for seven months in the year, he noted. He expressed confidence that the New Madrid county noxious weed project would be approved.

According to figures compiled in the 1960, census, Hanna said, there are 1,339 persons over 65 in Sikeston. A total of 589 live in substandard homes, he added.

To qualify for the new housing units, the applicants must be living in substandard houses and should not have assets above $4,500. Other things are considered with the amount of assets, he pointed out.

If the family has more than the maximum requirement but can show that it will be used in coming years, they also may qualify.

Priority of applicants for the housing units is based on need of the individual, Hanna said. Top preference will be given persons displaced by some governmental action. Veterans also will be given preference, he added.

The housing authority board is composed of five non-paid members: chairman, Dr. Leo A. Bruce, vice chairman, J. R. Harwell, Charles Mitchell, J. M. Law, and J. H. Bucher.

A pleasing, cosmopolitan home, it is a reflection of her philosphy. In her travels, as she haunts art shops, and the workshops of local craftsmen, she is looking for new facets of angels, new styles, new moods.

In her profession she is looking for new facets of the harp.

She feels she has covered the four main areas; classical and jazz music, arranging and composing.

Now, as a member of the national board of directors of the American Harp Society, she is developing new ideas for harp study. One idea which she will present at a board meeting this fall in New York City, is the inclusion of speech and dramatics training in a harp student's curriculum. She finds it is not unusual for an artist to play and narrate his music at the same time.

This is another expression of her philosphy; all mediums working together to bring something new to art.

"Flexibility in music is a fine thing," she said softly, "and curosity too. They are both important for a musician or any artist to have. Without them, music could be very boring. The artist is always searching for something better. I don't think we ever stop learning."

Timlin said he will tell residents in the area soon that their mail will be halted and will ask the regional office of the Post Office Department to investigate.

MAN AND THE CROSS

Man is a mess, and all the world realizes it. He may be a nice mess-a warm-hearted, well-intentioned shambles -but he remains intractable. Why, then, are we so reluctant to come out and say flatly that it is precisely the mess that is Christ's real metier? We have put crucifixes on our altars for centuries, but we have seldom gotten the point. It is precisely the impossible, the horrendous, the hopeless, and the useless that is the occasion of his work.

JOHNSON

build peaceful societies in Asia.

He said the committment of the seven nations at Manila to peace and progress "is not mere rhetoric to be stored in the dust bins of diplomatic history."

The goals of the allies—to be free from aggression, to raise living standards, to build a region of security and progress and to seek peaceful reconciliation—are why the U.S. soldiers are in Viet Nam, Johnson said.

"And when I looked into their faces at Camh Ran Bay, I knew that what we had done in Manila was for real," he said.

The President stated that the allied leaders saw much progress so far in both military and nation-building efforts in South Viet Nam.

And in extending their peace bid to North Viet Nam, the President declared that none of the allies had insisted on "the unconditional surrender of the forces opposing us or on the terms which those forces could reasonably find dishonorable."

Johnson spoke particularly of the allies' declaration of willingness to pull their troops out of South Viet Nam within six months-- "and perhaps even sooner" after peace conditions are met.

"This was, I think, an important step forward. Our intentions are in writing now for all the world to see," he said.

"Those who have doubted them can continue to doubt only to hide their unwillingness to seek peace."

Johnson concluded that "having followed every hint and made every gesture" toward peace at the Manila conference, "the ball is in the other court" now and it is up to Hanoi to make a conciliatory move.

On his visit to what he termed "the front line of a contest as far-reaching and as vital as any we have ever waged," the President reported that the men at Cam Ranh Bay and their "buddies throughout Viet Nam" are there "to keep aggression from succeeding."

"They are there to stop one nation from taking over another nation by force. They are there to help people who do not want to have an ideology pushed down their throats and imposed upon them," he said.

"They are there because somewhere, and at some place, the free nations of the world must say again to the militant disciples to Asian communism this far and no further. The time is now and the place is Viet Nam."

On a more personal note, Johnson said he found "The struggle in Viet Nam becomes very real when you stand among men who have tasted its agony and experienced its horror."

"No commander in chief," he said, "could meet face to face with these soldiers without asking himself:

'What is it they are doing here? What does it mean—the sacrifice and valor of the very young and the very best?'

The President answered this question by saying the American fighting men are in battle today, as in the past, to "resist aggression."

"I thank God for the courage of these men," he said. "I thank God for the unity of the free nations which are standing up to terror.

"And I pray to God that our adversary may soon decide that he can not succeed in what he is attempting, and that he then will renounce the use of force in Viet Nam."
